

Farm Animals Facts

Cow

Cows have highly developed senses. Because they have eyes at the sides of their heads, they can see what's coming up around and behind them - they have a sight range of more than 300° compared to our 180°. And when they put their heads down to graze, this range increases to nearly 360°, giving them an almost panoramic view.

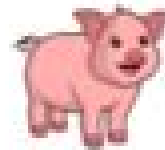

Donkey

Those adorable big ears serve several purposes. They help donkeys regulate their temperature, just as bunny ears help rabbits. Thanks to those ears, donkeys also have very acute hearing. In fact, they can hear other donkeys as far as 60 miles away.

Pig

Perhaps the most persistent misconception about pigs is that they're dirty. This impression is mainly due to their practice of wallowing in mud to cool down. As I mentioned, pigs can't sweat, so they have to use mud or water to regulate their body temperature.

Rabbit

A rabbit's teeth never stop growing! Instead, they're gradually worn down as the rabbit chews on grasses, wildflowers and vegetables meaning they never get too long.

Horse

Horses have excellent hearing, with the ability to rotate their ears 180 degrees to detect sounds in different directions. They are capable of hearing sounds at much higher frequencies than humans, which helps them to detect predators or other potential dangers.

Goat

Goats were one of the very first animals to be tamed by humans and were being herded over 9000 years ago. Goats are intelligent and emotional and can identify their friends and their offspring by their voices alone.

Duck

In fact, vocal communication happens while little ducklings are still in their egg! Waterfowl will communicate with others in the nest to synchronize their development in order to try and hatch around the same time. They also learn to recognize the sound of their mother's voice nearby.

Dog

Dogs' noses are wet to help them absorb scent chemicals! Their nose secretes a special mucus that helps to absorb these chemicals, and then they lick their noses to sample them, helping them understand what the smell is.
