FORT McPHERSON

The fort was established on the Oregon Trail on the south side of the Platte River in October 1865 on the eve of intensified Indian raids on the Plains. Built next to the well-known Cottonwood Springs and McDonald ranche, it commanded a strategic north-south Indian trail across the Platte valley.

First known as Cantonment McKean and then Fort Cottonwood, in February 1866 the fort was named for Major-General James B. McPherson. It served to protect the important Platte valley line of travel and communication and was the base for innumerable scouting parties and for field campaigns in 1865, 1866 and 1869. General Carr's campaign in 1869 broke the power of the Cheyennes and cleared the surrounding area from more than temporary Indian threats.

The Russian prince Alexis prepared here for his famous buffalo hunt in 1871. General Custer, Buffalo Bill, the North Brothers and their Pawnee scouts were often at the Fort.

The fort was abandoned in 1880, but a portion of the military reservation is now the Fort McPherson National Cemetery where rest soldiers from McPherson and other frontier forts.

Very little has been written about the real northeastern plains of Colorado the small communities that dot its open sky filled mountainless landscape Haxtun began as two separate homesteads proved up by Alice Strohm and Kate Fletcher Edwards who sold their land to the Lincoln Land Company in 1887 which led to the founding of the town The area was generally viewed as useless land in those early days but was promoted as being full of opportunity neglecting mention of a proclivity toward drought hailstorms and blizzards and the gamble of the land The High Plains survived though Its settlers proving to be hardy and industrious faced the challenges head on Today Haxtun and the surrounding communities of Fairfield Dailey Fleming and Paoli are filled with the descendants of those early settlers people with a strong sense of community and pride in their little High Plains towns Gunsmoke and Saddle Leather Charles G.
