- If you're the fortune teller, you'll be the one building the fortune teller with both your thumbs and index fingers pointing.
- The other participants take a question and then pick a square to use of the top flap of the fortune teller. When the teller places a card's name on the top flap, if you happen to pick "savage," for example, the fortune teller will show the square number based on the number of letters "savage" is made up of.
- Choose from the options chosen on the inside flap. Again, you can be creative here. Most use a single number. Depending on the fortune teller, you may have to pick a second number or have to repeat and then the fortune teller they reveal the problem. There's no right answer of when to do this, but you wouldn't want to keep your fortune teller.

Fotouhi brings together, introduces and analyses for the first time a significant range of diasporic Iranian writers alongside each other and alongside other diasporic literatures in English. While situating this body of work through existing theories such as postcolonialism, Fotouhi sheds new light on the role of Iranian literature and culture in Western literature by showing that these writings distinctively reflect experiences unique to the
