Methods: Theory, Tools and Applications Martin Wirsing, Jan A. Bergstra, 1989-09-20 Concepts, Design, and Performance Analysis of a Parallel Prolog Machine Joachim Beer, 1989-12-13 This monograph presents a novel execution model for the parallel execution of standard sequential Prolog In this execution model Prolog procedure calls can be efficiently pipelined and the author shows how even fully deterministic Prolog programs can be effectively mapped onto the proposed architecture The design is based on a highly optimized abstract Prolog specific instruction set A special feature of this work is a sophisticated classification scheme for Prolog variables which substantially reduces the overhead for unification with occur check To support the model an architecture consisting of a circular pipeline of independent processors has been designed This pipeline has been designed to work as a co processor to a UNIX based workstation In contrast to other attempts to execute sequential Prolog in parallel the proposed model does not restrict the use of any of the standard Prolog language features The book gives a full account of the execution model the system architecture and the abstract Prolog instruction set Optimal Algorithms Hristo Djidjev, 1989-11-08 This volume brings together papers from various fields of theoretical computer science including computational geometry parallel algorithms algorithms on graphs data structures and complexity of algorithms Some of the invited papers include surveys of results in particular fields and some report original research while all the contributed papers report original research Most of the algorithms given are for parallel models of computation The papers were presented at the Second International Symposium on Optimal Algorithms held in Varna Bulgaria in May June 1989 The volume will be useful to researchers and students in theoretical computer science especially in parallel computing Finite Representations of CCS and TCSP Programs by Automata and Petri

Nets Dirk A. Taubner, 1989-08-09 This work relates different approaches for the modelling of parallel processes On the one hand there are the so called process algebras or abstract programming languages with Milner's Calculus of Communicating Systems CCS and the theoretical version of Hoare's Communicating Sequential Processes CSP as main representatives On the other hand there are machine models i.e. the classical finite state automata transition systems for which however more discriminating notions of equivalence than equality of languages are used and secondly there are differently powerful types of Petri nets namely safe and general place transition nets respectively and predicate transition nets Within a uniform framework the syntax and the operational semantics of CCS and TCSP are explained We consider both Milner's well known interleaving semantics which is based on infinite transition systems as well as the new distributed semantics introduced by Degano et al which is based on infinite safe nets The main part of this work contains three syntax driven constructions of transition systems safe nets and predicate transition nets respectively Each of them is accompanied by a proof of consistency Due to intrinsic limits which are also investigated here neither for transition systems and finite nets nor for general nets does a finite consistent representation of all CCS and TCSP programs exist However sublanguages which allow finite representations are discerned On the other hand the construction of predicate transition nets is possible for all CCS programs in which every choice and every recursive body starts sequentially

Categorical Methods in Computer Science Hartmut Ehrig, Horst Herrlich, Hans-Jörg Kreowski, Gerhard Preuß, 1989-10-11 This volume contains selected papers of the International Workshop on Categorical Methods in Computer Science with Aspects from Topology and of the 6th International Data Type Workshop held in August-September 1988 in Berlin The 23 papers of this volume are grouped into three parts Part 1 includes papers on categorical foundations and fundamental concepts from category theory in computer science Part 2 presents applications of categorical methods to algebraic specification languages and techniques data types data bases programming and process specifications Part 3 comprises papers on categorical aspects from topology which mainly concentrate on special adjoint situations like cartesian closeness Galois connections reflections and coreflections which are of growing interest in categorical topology and computer science
