The IIT Foundation Series - Physics Class 10, 2/e , Foundation Trusts and Monitor Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons. Health Committee,2008 In 2004 a new type of NHS organisation was established the NHS foundation trust FT which was to benefit from a greater degree of financial and management freedom and different arrangements to improve local accountability There are now over 100 NHS foundation trusts This report examines the trusts and the organisation Monitor that monitors their performance FTs have some proven strengths They have performed well financially and generated surpluses and have been high performers in routine NHS process quality measures But it is not clear whether their high performance is the result of their changed status or simply a continuation of long term trends since the best trusts have become FTs Key aims of FTs were the promotion of innovation and greater public involvement There are examples of good practice in both of these areas but again there is a lack of objective evidence The Government should commission research to assess all aspects of FTs performance objectively so that best practice can be shared with other FTs and with the NHS more widely Concerns persist about what level of Government intervention in FTs affairs is legitimate and the Government must clarify what the appropriate levels of intervention are Finally Monitor s application process and regulatory regime seems to be well regarded However a complex regulatory environment of other organisations also surrounds FTs and in particular there is potential duplication between the Healthcare Commission and Monitor both of which evaluate the quality of FTs services
