Health Inequalities Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons. Health Committee, 2009 This report from the House of Commons Health Committee shows that whilst the health of all groups in England is improving over the last ten years health inequalities between the social classes have widened with the health of the rich improving more quickly than that of the poor Health inequalities are not only apparent between people of different socio economic groups they exist between different genders different ethnic groups and the elderly and people suffering from mental health problems or learning disabilities also have worse health than the rest of the population The causes of health inequalities are complex and include lifestyle factors smoking nutrition exercise to name only a few and also wider determinants such as poverty housing and education Access to healthcare may play a role and there are particular concerns about institutional ageism but this appears to be less significant than other determinants Ed
