Dealing with Deindustrialization: Economics, Politics, and Policy During the Decline of the New England Textile Industry, 1920-1960

The dissertation explores the impact on the American political economy of the demise of traditional manufacturing, or "deindustrialization."¹ It does so through a case study of New England, one of the first regions of the country to experience the phenomenon when textiles went into decline in the 1920s. The dissertation considers the reasons for and implications of the downsizing of textiles and examines the efforts that were made to deal with the problem. The study combines the methods and concerns of business and economic, political, and labor history.

Originally published in 1989 This major book deals with deindustrialization and regional economic transformation in five regions of the USA the industrial Midwest the South California New England and the New York metropolitan region Four perspective studies then connect these diverse experiences to intra metropolitan spatial adjustments growth prospects for industry and services and evolving regional theory and policy An overview chapter sums up the main themes common denominators and differences and some puzzles and unresolved issues All concerned with the industrial and regional evolution of the USA geographers economists planners policy makers will find this authoritative survey useful The Rise of the Entrepreneurial State Peter K. Eisinger,1988 The Rise of the Entrepreneurial State charts the development of state and local government initiatives to influence the market and strengthen economic development policies This trend marked a decisive break from governments traditionally small role in the affairs of private industry that defined the relationship between the public and private sector for the first half of the twentieth century The turn to state and local government intervention signaled a change in subnational politics that in many ways transcended partisan politics regional distinctions and racial alliances Eisinger s meticulous research uncovers state and local governments transition from supply side to demand side strategies of market creation He shows that instead of relying solely on the supply side strategies of tax breaks and other incentives to encourage business relocation some governments promoted innovation and the creation of new business approaches The Politics of Plant Closings John Portz,1990 A paper reprint of the 1988 original It is a political history that describes and analyzes the management of organized knowledge Wheatley takes Flexner and the Carnegie Foundation of 1910 as the model Portz political science Northeastern U combines a synthesis of the literature on urban politics and political economy with a close analysis of plant closings in Pittsburgh Pennsylvania Louisville Kentucky and Waterloo Iowa to illuminate the complexity of constraints upon and range of local government efforts to control the economic damage caused by shutdowns Paper edition unseen 12 95 Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc Portland OR good liberalism would be in greater harmony with contemporary public opinion and thought Liberalism rests on a moral vision of what constitutes the good life and a set of principles that can measure whether public policy accords with society's underlying philosophical principles Levin Waldman faults modern liberalism for obscuring these principles through a misplaced reliance on neutrality Liberalism he contends appears to have diverged from mainstream perceptions of traditional American values because policy is debated and formulated within the confines of this neutrality standard Levin Waldman develops a new methodology intended to take us away from the usual cost benefit analysis and move us closer to assessing public policies in terms of what best serves the common good

Global Production and Domestic Decay Brian D. Phillips, 2021-12-12 First Published in 1942 Phillips has written an important study covering three areas three areas theoretical empirical and public policy This book explores some of the explanations for and consequences of globalized production by transnational corporations A review of the theoretical underpinnings of the reasons for corporate overseas expansion precedes a discussion of transnational corporation overseas production facilities The literature reviewed supports the position that the exodus of manufacturing capital has been assisted by state policy which has encouraged capital flight and that corporate efforts to downsize manufacturing operations in the United States have added to corporate profitability and championed profits over the strengthening the domestic economy

Industrial Sunset Steven High, 2003-12-15 Plant shutdowns in Canada and the United States from 1969 to 1984 led to an ongoing and ravaging industrial decline of the Great Lakes Region Industrial Sunset offers a comparative regional analysis of the economic and cultural devastation caused by the shutdowns and provides an insightful examination of how mill and factory workers on both sides of the border made sense of their own displacement The history of deindustrialization rendered in cultural terms reveals the importance of community and national identifications in how North Americans responded to the problem Based on the plant shutdown stories told by over 130 industrial workers and drawing on extensive archival and published sources and songs and poetry from the time period covered Steve High explores the central issues in the history and contemporary politics of plant closings In so doing this study poses new questions about group identification and solidarity in the face of often dramatic industrial transformation

Managing Decline Suzanne Culter, 1999-05-01 Industrial restructuring has become a way of life the inevitable accommodation to rapid changes in technology to a global economy that affects large and small communities through the constant flow of goods and people and to the challenging patterns of economic viability that alter that flow Managing Decline examines the impact of coal mine closures in Yubari City Hokkaido once one of Japan's most prosperous coal producing cities and asks how Japanese culture has influenced the enactment of and response to industrial policy for restructuring in this community. For many years coal formed the backbone of Japan's economic development but the dangers and costs of mining became increasingly expensive for the industry and government. Global changes in coal production and exchange finally prompted Japan's decision in 1986 to shut down nearly all domestic coal mines in favor of coal imports. Japan's policy for industry restructuring has been applauded as one of the most comprehensive in addressing the needs of the industry, the workers and the community. At the micro level however the people in the community most affected by the policy decisions have been excluded from the process. Managing Decline reveals the stratified effects as well as compensation for the different groups in Yubari. Although the policy settlement package goes to the coal miners, community redevelopment ignores their needs, prompting them to leave the city and benefiting instead land owners and public employees. Revealed as well as the ways in which Japan's cultural values, particularly the vertical social structure as it affects decision making, status, occupations and company organization and the importance of maintaining the family system, figure in the policy process and its consequences. The author's research based on two years residence in Yubari during the last few years of the closures makes an important contribution to community studies of social change in Japan. It is also the first field study to examine the effects of industrial policy for restructuring in Japan at the worker and community level.

Fighting For Jobs Bruce Nissen, 1995-01-01 Examines the struggle of the unions and communities to save jobs in plant closing situations in the 1980s and shows why some labor community coalitions were more successful than others.

The Life and Death of Industrial Languedoc, 1700-1920 Christopher H. Johnson, 1995-05-04 In this seminal book Christopher Johnson writes a full scale study of the rise and decline of industrialization in the Bas Languedoc region of France. Working within a broad 200 year frame Johnson examines the process of how and why a successful industrial region transformed itself to agriculture. Johnson is primarily interested in de industrialization which sets him apart from previous historians who have studied regions only in terms of the growth toward industrialization.

American Living Standards Robert E. Litan, Robert Z. Lawrence, Charles L. Schultze, 2010-12-01 American Living Standards contends that the central problem of the U.S. economy has been for some years now and for the foreseeable future will continue to be the slowdown in the growth of living standards. This decline began in the early 1970s, was masked by a resort to overseas borrowing in the early 1980s and now threatens to get worse in the years immediately ahead as the foreign debt bills come due. The editors and contributors to this volume seek to advance our understanding of the causes and consequences of this potential slowdown in the growth of living standards. Equally important the book examines what policy measure holds out the best hope for presenting or at the very least minimizing this slowdown. Various chapters explore the changes in the level and distribution of incomes that have occurred in recent years, changes in the quality and distribution of jobs among industries and regions, what economists do and do not know about
