Round 1

You and your friends are on your way to a remote island vacation when suddenly the engine on your boat stops. The coast is behind you, there are no villages or water landings in immediate view, and you are a long way from a nearby desert island. Everyone looks for input on the plan, but the plan is to stay where you are. There is a small amount of food and water on the boat, but the plan is to stay where you are. There is a small amount of food and water on the boat, but the plan is to stay where you are. There is a small amount of food and water on the boat, but the plan is to stay where you are.

Round 2

From the safety of the raft you watch in shock as the sea plane strikes into the ocean. One of your group shouts out that nearby desert island and you all decide to start heading in that direction. However, there you realize that the raft is overloaded so more and more water begins to lap over the sides and about the raft body. You realize you need to get rid of some things. You have 5 minutes to decide what to throw overboard.

Round 3

You're getting close to the island and a shallow water but suddenly a 40-page out of the water and a massive storm starts swirling your raft. Your raft begins drifting against the raft destination to sink your entire group. In desperation someone suggests throwing things at the raft to sink it off. You have 5 minutes to decide what to throw overboard at the raft.

Completed: You successfully sank off the raft? Your team quickly rows the raft the rest of the way to the shore. You all strap the raft up the beach and collapse on the sand in relief.
