Abstract

A genre is itself an institution, for it is a socially sanctioned means of constructing and negotiating meanings, functioning to mediate the operation of other social institutions, taking its place in the complex interconnecting series of activities and events that constitute social life. Hence, while it is certainly possible to write of genres and institutions, like those of schooling, of the marketplace, or of family life, to mention a few, they are best understood as themselves institutional in character and part of the fabric of social life. The notion of genres is old, although scholarly interest in it for the purposes of educational linguistics dates from the late 1970s and 1980s. All traditions of the relevant research acknowledge that genres are found in both speech and writing. However, in practice, it is written genres and their role in literacy pedagogy which have generated the greatest body of research and debate. This paper reviews aspects of the development of genre theory, with particular relevance to educational discourse.

authors discuss the impact and use of new technology in the area. Suggestions for further reading are provided with every chapter. The Routledge Handbook of Applied Linguistics is an essential purchase for postgraduate students of applied linguistics. Editorial board: Ronald Carter, Guy Cook, Diane Larsen-Freeman and Amy Tsui. Society in Language, Language in Society. Wendy L. Bowcher, Jennifer Yameng Liang, 2016-01-26. This collection of original articles covers a range of research connecting with the work of the eminent linguist Ruqaiya Hasan. It contains contributions from M. A. K. Halliday, G. Williams, D. Butt, D. Miller and M. Berry among others, an interview with Ruqaiya Hasan and notes from the contributors about their connection with Ruqaiya Hasan's work. Perspectives on Multimodality. Eija Ventola, Cassily Charles, Martin Kaltenbacher, 2004. This volume signposts several paths of multimodality research and theory building today. The chapters represent a cross-section of current perspectives on multimodal discourse with a special focus on theoretical and methodological issues: mode hierarchies, modelling semiotic resources as multiple semiotic systems, multimodal corpus annotation. In addition, it discusses a wide range of applications for multimodal description in fields like mathematics, entertainment, education, museum design, medicine and translation. Genre in the Classroom. Ann M. Johns, 2001-11. Presents the major theoretical approaches to genre in applied linguistics: ESL, EFL, pedagogies, rhetoric and composition studies throughout the world; describes how research and pedagogy relate to each of these perspectives; discusses applications. Interpersonal Meaning in Multimodal English Textbooks. Yumin Chen, 2022-03-10. Exploring multimodality in English language teaching textbooks, this book focusses on how language and image are co-deployed within these resources in order to create and convey interpersonal meaning. Presenting cutting-edge research in appraisal studies and multimodal discourse analysis, Yumin Chen uses systemic functional linguistics and social semiotics to investigate how different voices are introduced and aligned intermodally in textbooks, extending the appraisal systems of engagement and graduation across language and image. The book also demonstrates how linguistic and visual semiotic resources co-instantiate attitude, paying special attention to the attitudinal dimension of curriculum goals for school students of different ages. Furthermore, it examines how different kinds of coding orientation are deployed in various educational contexts and different constituent genres. Demonstrating how the linguistic and semiotic theories can be adapted to analyze multimodal texts across language and image, Interpersonal Meaning in Multimodal English Textbooks offers new perspectives on how to employ multimodal resources to enhance the teaching and learning of English as a foreign language. Dilemmas of Science Teaching. John Wallace, William Loudon, 2005-06-29. This book explores sixteen contemporary issues in science education by examining the practical dilemmas these issues provoke for teachers. It is a unique book which presents student teachers with personal and professional insights into a whole range of science topics, including the laws of science, teaching ethics, laboratories and culture, gender and ethnicity. Each chapter takes as its focus one of the sixteen issues and begins with a case study of a science lesson written by a practising teacher. This is followed by a short reflective piece by the same teacher on how the lesson went and how opportunities for teaching and learning could be improved This reflection is followed by commentaries from some of the world's leading science educators on what they felt were the strengths and weaknesses of the lesson The extensive use of teacher written case studies and commentaries will make this book suitable for the pre service courses where case methods are typically used to provide a context for learning the craft of teaching The addition of commentaries from distinguished scholars makes the book relevant for postgraduate courses in science education and as a reference volume for teacher researchers
