Crossing Boundaries Giuseppina Marsico,Koji Komatsu,Antonio Iannaccone,2013-07-01 This book brings in the focus on the borders between different contexts that need to be crossed in the process of education. Despite the considerable efforts of various groups of researchers all over the World it does not seem that traditional educational psychology has succeeded in illuminating the complex issues involved in the schoolfamily relationship. From a methodological perspective there is no satisfactory explanation of the connection between representations and actual practice in educational contexts. Crossing Boundaries is an invitation to cultural psychology of educational processes to overcome the limits of existing educational psychology. Emphasizing social locomotion and the dynamic processes the book tries to capture the ambiguous richness of the transit from one context to another of the symbolic perspective that accompanies the dialogue between family and school of practices regulating the interstitial space between these different social systems. How family and school fill, occupy, circulate, avoid or strategically use this space in between. What discourses and practices saturate this Border Zone and/or cross from one side to the other. Crossing Boundaries gathers contributions with the clear aim of documenting and analysing what happens at points of contact between family culture and scholastic educational culture from the perspective of everyday life. This book is in itself an attempt to cross the border between the theorizing on the borders and how the outside world and the others are perceived from a certain point of view and the practices that characterize the school-home interaction.

Their Hopes, Fears and Reality Melinda Dooly, 2010 Based on a research project supported by the European Foundation, this book explores how primary and secondary students in four different European countries view theirs and the world's future. The results indicate that there is a gap between students' perspectives about the future and a clear pedagogical base for helping students confront many issues that are significant to them. The importance of ensuring students become critically aware citizens and helping them develop the ability and skills necessary for facing the challenges of the future are patent. This book spells out specific ways in which the issues which emerged from the study can be approached from diverse fields: geography, language learning, and arts and crafts. It also discusses some cross-disciplinary educational issues relevant to all teachers: general education and cross-disciplinary as well as offering two proposals on how teachers can count on sufficient psychological support to face the challenges of teaching in an increasingly complex environment and promote cooperative behaviour in the classroom.

Cases on Educational Technology Implementation for Facilitating Learning Ritzhaupt, Albert D., 2013-03-31 With constant explorative research on educational technologies it remains important to have a detailed understanding of the implementation of these innovations

International Conference, 2007-09-18 In August 2005 over 500 researchers from the field of science education met at the 5th European Science Education Research Association conference Two of the main topics at this conference were the decrease in the number of students interested in school science and concern about the worldwide outcomes of studies on students scientific literacy This volume includes edited versions of 37 outstanding papers presented including the lectures of the keynote speakers Graduate & Professional Programs 1994 Editors of Peterson's guides, 1994 Perspectives on Thinking, Learning, and Cognitive Styles Robert J. Sternberg, Li-fang Zhang, 2014-04-08 This volume presents the most comprehensive balanced and up to date coverage of theory and research on cognitive thinking and learning styles in a way that represents diverse theoretical perspectives includes solid empirical evidence testing the validity of these perspectives and shows the application of these perspectives to school situations as well as situations involving other kinds of organizations International representation is emphasized with chapters from almost every major leader in the field of styles Each chapter author has contributed serious theory and or published empirical data work that is primarily commercial or that implements the theories of others The book's central premise is that cognitive learning and thinking styles are not abilities but rather preferences in the use of abilities Traditionally many psychologists and educators have believed that people's successes and failures are attributable mainly to individual differences in abilities However for the past few decades research on the roles of thinking learning and cognitive styles in performance within both academic and nonacademic settings has indicated that they account for individual differences in performance that go well beyond abilities New theories better differentiate styles from abilities and make more contact with other psychological literatures recent research in many cases is more careful and conclusive than are some of the older studies Cognitive learning and thinking styles are of interest to educators because they predict academic performance in ways that go beyond abilities and because taking styles into account can help teachers to improve both instruction and assessment and to show sensitivity to cultural and individual diversity among learners They are also of interest in business where instruments to assess styles are valuable in selecting and placing personnel The state of the art research and theory in this volume will be of particular interest to scholars and graduate students in cognitive and educational psychology managers and others concerned with intellectual styles as applied in educational industrial and corporate settings
