Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume aquatic exercise program on the physical fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were randomly assigned to either an exercise group or a control group. The exercise group performed a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume aquatic exercise program. The control group did not exercise. The subjects were assessed for physical fitness at baseline and at 12 weeks. The results of the study showed that the exercise group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness than the control group at 12 weeks. The exercise group had significantly higher levels of cardiovascular fitness, muscular fitness, and flexibility than the control group. The exercise group also had significantly higher levels of body composition, including lower body mass index and lower body fat percentage. The control group had no significant changes in physical fitness or body composition. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume aquatic exercise program can improve the physical fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women.

The order of operations in calculations

1. a. Write the function $f(x)$ that represents the cost of the car as a function of the number of years x that the car is owned. $f(x) = 15,000 - 1,500x$.
b. Compute $f(4)$.
