Geology of the Country Around Worcester ,1997 Paleozoic Plays of NW Europe A. A. Monaghan,J. R. Underhill,A. J. Hewett,J. A. E. Marshall,2019-03-06 North Sea and onshore Netherlands and Germany Paleozoic hydrocarbon plays across parts of NW Europe remain relatively under explored both onshore and offshore This volume brings together new and previously unpublished knowledge about the Paleozoic plays of NW Europe to describe significant additional exploration opportunities outside and below existing plays The volume contains papers on Paleozoic plays in the North Sea Irish Sea onshore UK France and Switzerland They highlight how improvements in seismic data quality and the availability of previously unpublished well datasets form the basis for improved understanding of local to regional interpretations that move forward from generalized basin development models The improved structural trap and source rock basin definition feeds to better constrained locally variable burial uplift maturation and migration models Particularly notable are the significant mapped extents and thickness of Paleozoic source reservoir and seal rocks in areas previously dismissed as regional highs and platforms The Stationery Office Annual Catalogue Great Britain. Her Majesty's Stationery Office,1997 The Stationery Office Annual Catalogue Stationery Office (Great Britain),1997 Stationery Office Annual Catalogue 1997 ,1998 Memoirs of the Geological Survey, England and Wales Clement Reid,2018-01-20 Excerpt from Memoirs of the Geological Survey England and Wales The Geology of the Country Around Dorchester The district described in the present Memoir was originally mapped for the Geological Survey by the late H W Bristow and was included in Sheets 15 16 17 and 18 of the Geological Survey Map of England published between the years 1850 and 1856 In these maps the superficial deposits were not repte sented Recently 1894 8 the ground has been re surveyed on maps of the scale of six inches to one mile by Mr Clement Reid except the south west corner of the map previously te mapped by Mr A Strahan and the north west corner re mapped by Mr J ukes browne The superficial deposits have now been surveyed and they are shown upon the map only one edition of which is published The country around Dorchester has not attracted much attention from geologists for it is an inland area not exhibiting clear natural sections and yielding few fossils that cannot more conveniently be obtained in adjoining districts Of the few papers that refer to it nearly all treat it as an outlying part of a larger region References to these papers will be found in the Geological Bibliography of Dorset published last year in the Memoir on the Geology of Purbeck Prestwich the Rev Osmond Fisher and Dr Charles Barrois are almost the only writers who have much to say about the district for no Memoir was published to accompany the original maps of the Geological Survey The present explanation has been prepared by Mr Reid About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing

Woodward, 2015-06-16 Excerpt from Memoirs of the Geological Survey England and Wales The Geology of the Country Around Norwich Explanation of Quarter Sheets N E and 66 S E Of the One Inch Geological Survey Map of England and Wales One of the earliest geological descriptions of Norfolk was published by Samuel Woodward in 1833 To the grandson of this old geologist has been confided the task of preparing the present Geological Survey Memoir which I think will be found not unworthy of its author and his name The Chalk of Norfolk is interesting as probably exhibiting higher beds than occur elsewhere in England The very full lists of fossils give great value to the Chapters on the Cretaceous Beds and the Crag In the grouping of the Glacial Beds the author has simply adopted a classification applicable to the district being of opinion that no general classification can be established until the Glacial Beds are minutely mapped over much larger areas This work is now in progress by the Geological Survey As it proceeds we shall probably learn that these beds are less complex than they appear to be and that many of the divisions have only a local value About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Geological Notes and Local Details for 1:10 000 Sheet SO85NW Worcester (NW) K. Ambrose, British Geological Survey, Keyworth (GB), Natural Environment Research Council (Great Britain), 1988 Memoirs of the Geological Survey Geological Survey of Great Britain, 1913 Memoirs of the Geological Survey Horace B. Woodward, 2015-06-27 Excerpt from Memoirs of the Geological Survey England and Wales the Geology of the Country Around Fakenham Wells and Holt Explanation of Quarter Sheets 68 N W And S W The part of Norfolk described in the following Memoir is contained in the two Quarter Sheets 68 N W and S W It presents no remarkable geological features being essentially an agricultural district which owes its fertility to the marls and loams that cover the greater part of its surface So widespread are these superficial deposits that the underlying platform of Chalk comes to the surface only here and there One edition of the maps that on which the drifts are coloured is therefore sufficient to show the geology since it is quite impossible to trace any lines under these overlying accumulations or to be certain how far Pliocene or other deposits may not occasionally intervene between them and the Chalk Owing to the difficulty in correlating the Glacial marls and clays it has been thought advisable to colour the Boulder Clay in one tint and to express by one colour also all the Glacial Sands and Gravels although more than one sub division may in each case be thus united These deposits are mainly a prolongation of the Contorted Drifts of Cromer like which though their grouping and structure seem simple on the map they are subject to considerable variation and to local and doubtless glacial disturbance Much detail necessarily of an uninteresting nature is given in this Memoir but it is here put on record as it may prove of value in regard to local questions of drainage water supply lime burning brick making and the supply of road metal About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Memoirs of the Geological Survey W. Whitaker, 2015-06-26 Excerpt from Memoirs of the Geological Survey The Geology of the Country Around the and Harleston Explanation of Quarter Sheet The following brief Memoir describes the simple geology of a portion of the counties of Suffolk and Norfolk The feature of most geological interest in the district to which it refers is perhaps the brick earth at Hoxne which since the discovery of flint implements in it at the end of the last century has been the subject of much discussion Some writers have classed it among Glacial deposits but it is coloured on the Map and described in this Memoir as Post glacial Some of the more important publications that relate to the geology of the district are cited in the footnotes but for fuller reference to this literature the reader is requested to consult for Suffolk the Geological Survey Memoir on The Geology of the country around Ipswich where a complete list is given up to the year 1885 and for Norfolk the Survey Memoir on The Geology of the country around Norwich in which the list of papers is completed up to 1881 About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Memoirs of the Geological Survey, England and Wales W. Whitaker, 2015-06-26 Excerpt from Memoirs of the Geological Survey England and Wales The Geology of the Borders of the Wash Including Boston and Hunstanton Explanation of Sheet 69 Old Series The districts described in this volume are contained in Sheet 69 Old Series of the one inch Geological Survey Map of England and Wales They embrace The Wash and the tracts of Lincolnshire and West Norfolk which surround that inlet of the sea On the south and west lies the great plain of the Fenland while to the east the ground undulates as a wide plateau no part of which reaches 300 feet in height The western part of the region was chiefly surveyed by Mr S B J Skertchly and was described by him in a general Memoir on the Fenland 1877 The eastern or Norfolk portion consisting of Cretaceous rocks partially concealed under deposits of sand gravel and boulder clay was mapped by Messrs W Whitaker H B Woodward A C G Cameron C Reid G Barrow and S B J Skertchly The present Memoir was entrusted to the editorship of Mr Whitaker and on his retirement from the Survey it was completed by Mr Jukes Browne For such parts of the district of the Fenland and The Wash as are included in Sheet 69 the descriptions given in Mr Skertchly s Memoir just referred to have been reprinted in the following pages The eastern district is described by the various officers who took part in the Survey and whose several contributions are marked by their initials Mr William Hill rendered important service to the Geological Survey by making special examinations of the zones and lithological subdivisions of the Chalk and supplying much valuable information in regard thereto The geology of the country illustrated by the Map and Memoir possesses considerable interest but the well known Red Chalk of Hunstanton is no doubt its distinguishing feature As far back as 1816 this band of rock was noticed by William Smith Among the later observers reference may be made to R C Taylor Sedgwick C B Rose The Rev T Wiltshire and Professor H G Seeley About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Memoirs of the Geological Survey C. Fox-Strangways, 2017-12-25 Excerpt from Memoirs of the Geological Survey England and Wales The Geology of the Country North East of York and South of Malton Explanation of Quarter Sheet 93 N E New Series Sheet 63 The area contained in the map is 216 square miles The only town of any size is the city of York but there are a large number of villages about 70 in all some of which are of considerable importance The Ouse with its tributaries the Derwent and the Foss are the only rivers of importance that traverse the map All of these were formerly navigable for barges but now only the Ouse and Derwent are in use About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Memoirs of the Geological Survey England and Wales Clement Reid, 2015-06-26

Excerpt from Memoirs of the Geological Survey England and Wales The Geology of the Country Around Ringwood The area described in this Memoir forms the north western portion of the Hampshire Basin including a fine range of chalk hills bordering Cranborne Chase on the north west and a part of the picturesque woodland of the New Forest on the southeast The original geological survey made by H W Bristow and Joshua Trimmer was published in 1858 on the old series map sheet 15 and it is satisfactory that no important alterations have been found necessary in the boundaries which were then drawn on the old map to indicate the Tertiary and Cretaceous divisions The re survey was carried out during the years 1896 1900 mainly by Mr Reid in the Tertiary ground and by Mr Bennett in the Cretaceous area Mr Dixon assisting to finish the work around Cranborne Village Horton and Verwood In the course of this new survey the Drifts have been mapped and the special studies made by Mr Reid on these superficial deposits have led him to believe that there is evidence of an old river course which probably in Newer Pliocene times connected the Salisbury rivers with Southampton before they were captured and diverted along the course of the subsequent Lower Avon No memoir was published in explanation of the old series map and the present one has been written by Mr Reid with the aid of notes furnished by his colleagues Our general knowledge of the area owes much to the labours of Prestwich on the Tertiary strata and of Sir John Evans on the deposits yielding Palaeolithic implements and the officers of the Survey have received further assistance from Mr E Westlake Dr H P Blackmore and Mr G H Fowler M S copies of the six inch maps have been deposited in the Office About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
