represents one of the greatest population movements the planet has ever seen By 2030 more than 50% of Asia's population will be urban and between now and then more than 500 million people in Asia will have moved looking for jobs housing food and water They will be both part of a problem and most of the solution building around them the cities they will live in

Urbanization and Socio-Economic Development in Africa Steve Kayizzi-Mugerwa, Abebe Shimeles, Nadège Désirée Yaméogo, 2014-05-16 The main goal of this book is to put urbanization and its challenges squarely on Africa's development agenda Planned urbanization can improve living conditions for the majority help in the expansion of the middle class and create conditions for economic transformation However many African cities have developed haphazardly resulting in the decline of public services in slum proliferation and increases in poverty African cities thrive on activities characterized by easy entry and low productivity generally referred to as the informal sector Indeed today some urban dwellers are poorer than their cousins in the countryside In spite of reform attempts many governments have not been able to create an enabling environment with adequate infrastructure and institutions to sustain markets for easy exchange and production This study argues that with careful policies and planning the situation can be changed If the recent natural resource led economic boom that we have seen in many African countries is used for structural reforms and urban renewal African cities could become centers of economic opportunity The challenge for African policymakers is to ensure that urban development is orderly and that the process is inclusive and emphasizes the protection of the environment hence green growth
