Growing Up Without Getting Lost Melissa Trevathan, Helen Stitt Goff, 2009-08-30 There was a time not so long ago when everything in life seemed pretty simple. You had great friends, you got along with your parents most of the time, and you were pretty happy with the way your life was. But suddenly it seems like everything is changing. Your friends expect way too much from you and often let you down. You fight with your parents more than you'd like, and they never seem to be happy with you. You just don't understand why your life seems so chaotic now. Melissa and Sissy, the authors of this book, think they can help you figure out some of the big questions inundating your mind: Who am I? What do I want? What should I do? Who do I want to be? While they're no longer teenagers, Melissa and Sissy remember a bit about their entry into teenage life. But more than that, they talk with girls who are a lot like you every day: girls who are feeling pressure from everyone around them, who are feeling like they're changing in ways they don't understand, physically, emotionally, and spiritually, and they feel like their lives are out of their own control. If you've ever asked yourself any of those questions above or if you just don't know why you feel like everything is changing and you miss the good old days of Barbies and board games, this book can help you understand who you are and give you hope for who you are becoming. Growing Up Protestant Margaret Lamberts Bendroth, 2002 Home and family are key yet relatively unexplored dimensions of religion in the contemporary United States. American cultural lore is replete with images of saintly nineteenth-century American mothers and their children. During the twentieth century, however, the form and function of the American family have changed radically, and religious beliefs have evolved under the challenges of modernity. As these transformations took place, how did religion manage to fit into modern family life? In this book, Margaret Lamberts Bendroth examines the lives and beliefs of white middle-class mainline Protestants, principally northern Presbyterians, Baptists, Methodists, and Congregationalists, who are theologically moderate or liberal. Mainliners have pursued family issues for most of the twentieth century, churning out hundreds of works on Christian childrearing. Bendroth's book explores the role of family within a religious tradition that sees itself as America's cultural center. In this balanced analysis, the author traces the evolution of mainliners' roles in middle-class American culture and sharpens our awareness of the ways in which the mainline Protestant experience has actually shaped and reflected the American sense of self. Growing Up Pentecostal J. Stephen Conn, 2006-03 Growing up Pentecostal is the true confession of an ultimate insider among Pentecostal preachers' kids. Only a person with J. Stephen Conn's unique background could tell a story.

It is insightful at times uproariously funny and told with the sensitivity of a true believer. Stephen grew up as the third of twelve children in the home of one of America's most prominent Pentecostal ministers. This is a tale of his childhood antics and his spiritual odyssey. He gives a disarmingly honest account of his struggle to come to terms with his own calling as he traveled throughout America as a teenage preacher. This is an extraordinary and entertaining story of the Pentecostal Holiness movement during the mid twentieth century. It gives a rare insight a human face to what has been the fastest growing branch of the Christian religion for the past one hundred years.

Growing Up Muslim Andrew C. Garrod, Robert Kilkenny, 2014-04-15 While 9/11 and its aftermath created a traumatic turning point for most of the writers in this book, it is telling that none of their essays begin with that moment. These young people were living, probing and shifting their Muslim identities long before 9/11. I've heard it said that the second generation never asks the first about its story, but nearly all the essays in this book include long, intimate portrayals of Muslim family life, often going back generations. These young Muslims are constantly negotiating the differences between families for whom faith and culture were matters of honor and North America's youth culture with its emphasis on questioning, exploring and inventing one's own destiny from the Introduction by Eboo Patel. In Growing Up Muslim, Andrew Garrod and Robert Kilkenny present fourteen personal essays by college students of the Muslim faith who are themselves immigrants or are the children of immigrants to the United States. In their essays, the students grapple with matters of ethnicity, religious prejudice and misunderstanding and what is termed Islamophobia. The fact of 9/11 and subsequent surveillance and suspicion of Islamic Americans, particularly those hailing from the Middle East and the Asian Subcontinent, have had a profound effect on these students, their families and their communities of origin.

Growing Up Urkel Jaleel White, 2024-11-19 A memoir by a noted icon of 90s television, the actor who portrayed Steve Urkel on the hit sitcom Family Matters.

Growing Up Godless Anna Strhan, Rachael Shillitoe, 2025-05-20 How children's non-belief and non-religion are formed in everyday life. The number of those identifying as non-religious has risen rapidly in Britain and many other parts of Europe and North America. Although non-religion and non-belief are especially prevalent among younger people, we know little about the experience of children who are growing up without religion. In Growing Up Godless, Anna Strhan and Rachael Shillitoe fill this scholarly gap, examining how, when, where and with whom children in England learn to be non-religious and non-believing. Drawing on in-depth interviews and extensive ethnographic fieldwork with children, their parents and teachers, Strhan and Shillitoe offer a pioneering account of what these children believe in and care about and how they navigate a social landscape of growing religious diversity. Moving beyond the conventional understanding of non-religion as merely the absence of religion, Strhan and Shillitoe show how children's non-religion and non-belief emerge in relation to a pervasive humanism centering the agency, significance and achievements of humans and values of equality and respect interwoven in their homes, schools, media and culture. Their findings offer important new insight into the rise and formation of non-religious identities and more broadly the ways that children's beliefs and values are shaped in contemporary society.
