Special Focus on the Biology of Aging Vincent J. Cristofalo, M. Powell Lawton, 2013-12-17 New Frontiers in Cancer Therapies: Focus on Transcription Factors, GTPases, Phosphatases and GPCRs, 2018-2030 Roots Analysis, 2018-05-01

The New Frontiers in Cancer Therapies Focus on Transcription Factors GTPases Phosphatases and GPCRs 2018 2030 report provides a comprehensive study on the current market and therapeutic potential of the various pharmacological interventions designed against difficult to modulate cancer targets. It features an elaborate discussion on the future potential of this evolving domain focusing on phosphatases transcription factors small GTPases specifically Ras family and undruggable G protein coupled receptors GPCRs. One of the key objectives of the study was to review and quantify the future opportunity for the ongoing product development programs of both small and big pharmaceutical firms. Amongst other elements the report features:

- 1 A detailed assessment of the current market landscape of drugs being developed against various undruggable cancer targets featuring information on the developer phase of development clinical preclinical or discovery stage of product candidate s information on type of molecule s biological target s mechanism of action route of administration and key therapeutic indication s
- 2 Elaborate profiles of key companies selected based on pipeline strength each profile features an overview of the company details on its product portfolio technology overview wherever applicable detailed information on advanced stage pipeline candidates featuring a drug overview clinical trial information and recent developments and a comprehensive future outlook
- 3 A section on emerging technologies and platforms that are aiding the development of therapies capable of targeting biological molecules which were previously considered as undruggable
- 4 A detailed publication analysis on more than 70 research articles that have been published between January 2014 and March 2018 highlighting the key focus areas biological targets and indications of the ongoing research activity in this field
- 5 An analysis of the partnerships that have been established in this domain in the recent past covering R these include:
 - A a bull s eye analysis highlighting the distribution of pipeline candidates in terms of phase of development type of target family and type of molecule
 - B a three dimensional and five dimensional spider web analyses of candidate therapeutics based on different parameters namely number of publications grants awarded to promote development active clinical trials current phase of development and the number of companies developing drugs against various undruggable targets and
 - C a world map representation depicting the most active geographies in terms of the presence of companies developing drug candidates against difficult to modulate cancer targets

Growth Factors and Psychiatric Disorders Derek J. Chadwick, Jamie A. Goode, 2008-04-15

The recent identification of susceptibility genes for schizophrenia depression and learning and memory dysfunction suggest that psychiatric disorders may be influenced by a small number of genes with multiple actions. This is the first book to investigate the role of growth factors in these disorders which should provide clues to the underlying biochemical mechanisms. For example recent studies have substantiated the provocative finding that neuregulin 1 NRG1 is a candidate gene for schizophrenia Neuregulin and its receptors the ErbB tyrosine kinases are essential for development of the cardiovascular and nervous systems Lack of NRG1 function may be involved in dysregulation of synaptogenesis and synaptic plasticity in the adult mediated through glutamate receptor function Polymorphisms for BDNF brain derived neurotrophic factor have also been implicated in the pathogenesis of schizophrenia BDNF is a prevalent neurotrophic factor that plays an important role in the pathophysiology of depression bipolar disease and other psychiatric disorders Other topics addressed in this book include neuroplasticity and neurotrophic factors signal transduction by neurotrophins intracellular trafficking of growth factors trophic factors and cognitive functions neurotrophins and depression and pharmacological treatments of schizophrenia Growth Factors J. Cartilage Molecular Aspects Brian K. Hall, Stuart A. Newman, 1991-06-18 Cartilage plays diverse roles as a definitive supporting tissue in some organs the basis of low friction surfaces in joints and a transient morphogenetic template during embryogenesis and repair of the skeleton The versatility of cartilage is derived from the remarkable material properties of its extracellular matrix the wide spectrum of regulatory systems that influence the synthesis and degradation of the unique molecular constituents of this matrix and the development and growth of the cells that produce it This book touches on each of these areas and provides the first comprehensive reviews of the molecular biology of the genes specifying the collagenous and noncollagenous proteins of the cartilage matrix as well as the biophysical chemical properties of the matrix that suits it to the various functions it performs Up to date critical reviews of the mineralization and degradation of cartilage matrix the roles of polypeptide growth and inducing factors of ions in the regulation of cartilage growth and development and the unique requirements of the energy metabolism of cartilage as a nonvascular tissue make this volume a useful source for concepts and results for the multiple disciplines that play a part in modern cartilage research
