Growth Hormone Secretagogues Barry B. Bercu, Richard F. Walker, 2012-12-06 The traditional concept of a neuroendocrine mechanism for regulation of growth hormone GH secretion is based in large part on the work of Roger Guillemin The work of Dr Guillemin who was awarded the 1977 Nobel Prize in Physiology and Medicine supported the view that quantitative change in GH secretion was the net result of pituitary stimulation and inhibition by the hypothalamic neurohormones GH releasing hormone GHRH and somatostatin somatotropin release inhibiting factor SRIF respectively During the 1970s another endocrine research pioneer Dr Cyril Bowers discovered that structural modification of enkephalin resulted in a family of peptides with GH releasing properties These compounds simply called GH releasing peptide GHRP were originally thought to mimic GHRH However upon subsequent investigation they were found to supplement the activity of the natural hormone through a different mechanism Nearly two decades after their discovery the differences between GHRP and GHRH have been described by many different laboratories throughout the world The complementary GH secretagogues have different binding sites second messengers and effects on gene expression Based on these differences it has been suggested that expansion of the original two hormone mechanisms for GH regulation to include a third molecule may be appropriate even though the naturally occurring analogue of GHRP has not yet been identified Despite our lack of knowledge concerning the natural product mimicked by GHRP clinical development of the new family of GH secretagogues for diagnostic and therapeutic purposes has begun in earnest
