Daines,1979 National Transportation Planning Adib Kanafani,Daniel Sperling,2012-12-06 Soon after starting work on the development of a methodology for national trans portation planning in Venezuela we realized the importance of an integrated management process for such an effort We also realized the absence in the literature of specific guidelines on how to manage and conduct a transportation planning effort The literature on the subject of national transportation planning is predominantly theoretical and technical in nature To a large extent the absence of literature on management and broad based methodological approaches reflects the limited and ad hoc nature of the experience in national transportation planning This book is an attempt to fill that gap The main objective of the book is to show one way by which a methodology for national transportation planning can be integrated into a process management framework It reports on the experience that the authors had in the Venezuelan case as well as in earlier national planning efforts The book is not intended as a theoretical discussion of planning Instead it adopts a particular theoretical stand and proceeds on that basis to develop a program for applying a specific methodology The intention is to leave as much of the details and elaborations of that methodology to the user This is motivated by two considerations The first is a pragmatic attempt to limit the scope of the book Technology and Underdevelopment F. Rural Women synthesizes the fragmented empirical evidence and the wide range of theoretical approaches on the effects of modernisation on women in the developing world Using a multi disciplinary methodology empirical and sectoral overviews and country case studies it draws together the literature to clarify the issues and the policies The book begins with a conceptual overview and analyses the applicability of traditional theories of technological change and impact on gender based distributional questions It proceeds to compare the African and Asian experience examines the African situation regionally and then as a set of four country case studies The authors find that the imperfections of rural factor markets have contributed to women s concentration in labour intensive sectors marked by low productivity and low returns Biases in the agrarian structure and the extension services are largely responsible for the Institutionalisation of discrimination against women Finally the volume identifies the social economic and technical constraints to the diffusion of technologies relevant to rural women s tasks In the final chapter the book s analysis is further refined and extended so that its conclusions to both theory and policy making are clearly brought out and areas of future research identified This book is an essential read for students and scholars of labour economics women s studies and economics in general Foreign Acquisitions Newsletter to women particularly those living in rural areas would such employment have an effect on family size Would their jobs compete for the women s time as mothers and housewives offer them an alternative route to acquiring status and a sense of purpose and perhaps also provide the women with an independent source of income which would enable them to achieve more control over their lives But as the original volume makes clear the situation is more complicated than it first appears to be
