Groundnut Affair:

The Groundnut Affair Alan Wood, 1950 The Groundnut Affair Alan Wood, 1950 Weather, Climate, and the Geographical Imagination Martin Mahony, Samuel Randalls, 2020-03-24 As global temperatures rise under the forcing hand of humanity's greenhouse gas emissions new questions are being asked of how societies make sense of their weather of the cultural values which are afforded to climate and of how environmental futures are imagined feared predicted and remade Weather Climate and Geographical Imagination contributes to this conversation by bringing together a range of voices from history of science historical geography and environmental history each speaking to a set of questions about the role of space and place in the production circulation reception and application of knowledges about weather and climate The volume develops the concept of geographical imagination to address the intersecting forces of scientific knowledge cultural politics bodily experience and spatial imaginaries which shape the history of knowledges about climate Colonialism and Development Michael A. Havinden, David Meredith, 2002-06-01 British colonial rule of the tropics is the critical background to contemporary development issues This study of Britain's economic and political relationship with its tropical colonies provides detailed analyses of trade and policy The considerations of past successes and failures elucidate current opportunities and developments No other book covers this broad topic with such detail and clarity Bilharzia John Farley, 1991 Professor Farley describes how governments and organizations faced one particular tropical disease bilharzia or schistosomiasis African Socialism in Postcolonial Tanzania Priya Lal, 2015-12-01 Drawing on a wide range of oral and written sources this book tells the story of Tanzania's socialist experiment the ujamaa villagization initiative of 1967-75 Inaugurated shortly after independence ujamaa familyhood in Swahili both invoked established socialist themes and departed from the existing global repertoire of development policy seeking to reorganize the Tanzanian countryside into communal villages to achieve national development Priya Lal investigates how Tanzanian leaders and rural people creatively envisioned ujamaa and documents how villagization unfolded on the ground without affixing the project to a trajectory of inevitable failure By forging an empirically rich and conceptually nuanced account of ujamaa African Socialism in Postcolonial Tanzania restores a sense of possibility and process to the early years of African independence refines prevailing theories of nation building and development and expands our understanding of the 1960s and 70s world Imperialism and Development Nicholas Westcott, 2020 A compelling exploration of one of the most ill advised and calamitous interventions in colonial development history Nkrumah and the West Matteo Landricina, 2018 The developmental years of Ghana the first state to become independent from colonialism in sub-Saharan Africa in 1957 were marked by the United Kingdom's effort to showcase its former colony as a model of successful democracy export for the rest of Black Africa They called it the Ghana Experiment Major Western powers like the United States and West Germany participated in the attempt to keep Ghana aligned with the West As Ghana's President Kwame Nkrumah embarked on a bold anti-imperialistic pan-African policy Britain and the United States concerted a common strategy which accelerated Nkrumah's eventual downfall in 1966 and brought Ghana back into the Western sphere of influence

Ecology and Power in the Age of Empire Corey Ross, 2017 Ecology and Power in the Age of Empire provides the first wide ranging environmental history of the heyday of European imperialism from the late nineteenth century to the end of the colonial era. It focuses on the ecological dimensions of the explosive growth of tropical commodity production, global trade and modern resource management strategies that still visibly shape our world today and how they were related to broader social, cultural and political developments in Europe's colonies. Covering the overseas empires of all the major European powers, Corey Ross argues that tropical environments were not merely a stage on which conquest and subjugation took place but were an essential part of the colonial project, profoundly shaping the imperial enterprise even as they were shaped by it. The story he tells is not only about the complexities of human experience but also about people's relationship with the ecosystems in which they were themselves embedded: the soil, water, plants and animals that were likewise a part of Europe's empire. Although it shows that imperial conquest rarely represented the signal ecological trauma that some accounts suggest, it nonetheless demonstrates that modern imperialism marked a decisive and largely negative milestone for the natural environment. By relating the expansion of modern empire, global trade and mass consumption to the momentous ecological shifts that they entailed, this book provides a historical perspective on the vital nexus of social, political and environmental issues that we face in the twenty-first century world.

Settlement Schemes in Tropical Africa Robert Chambers, 2013-08-21 First published in 1998. This is Volume XIII of eighteen in the Sociology of Development series. Originally published in 1969, this book is a study of organizations and development of two rural development projects by the author whilst working in the Administration in Kenya: a grazing control programme and the Mwea Irrigation Settlement.
