Minds and Behaviors at Work Wendy Cunningham, Pablo Acosta, Noël Muller, 2016-07-19 Although the Latin American region has shown an impressive growth in educational attainment over the past two decades that education has failed to yield expected benefits A mounting body of research and policy debates argues that the quantity of education is not an adequate metric of human capital acquisition Rather individuals skills what they actually know and can do should stand as policy targets and be fostered across the life course Evidence from around the world shows that both cognitive and socio emotional skills are demanded by employers and favorably affect a range of outcomes including educational attainment and employment outcomes Through original empirical research investigating the role of cognitive and socio emotional skills in shaping adults labor market outcomes in Bolivia Colombia El Salvador and Peru supplemented by similar studies in other Latin American countries this review confirms that cognitive skills matter for reaping labor market gains in terms of higher wages and formal jobs in Latin America but so do socio emotional skills Moreover socio emotional skills seem to particularly influence labor force participation and tertiary education attendance as a platform to build knowledge The study also presents a policy framework for skills development by i providing insights by developmental psychologists about when people are neuro biologically socio emotionally and situationally ready to develop socio emotional skills and ii suggesting new directions in cognitive development

Progress, Change and Development in Early Childhood Education and Care Elizabeth Coates,Dorothy Faulkner,2017-10-02 In 2000 the Millennium Development Goals set out targets aimed at creating a safer more prosperous and more equitable world If these goals were to be achieved children s lives would indeed be transformed In this collection achievements against these targets are identified with each contributor examining the progress made in early years provision in Australia China England Greece the Netherlands Portugal South Africa and Sweden They highlight the priorities and agendas of their respective governments and focus on the trends and issues which are particularly relevant to each situation thereby revealing the social and educational inequalities that persist across countries A common theme running through this volume concerns the political tensions that arise when governments and educators hold fundamentally different views about the nature and purpose of early years education and the needs of children and families It is clear that although the past two decades have seen many changes in attitude towards the importance of the early years of life politically economically and environmentally much still remains to be done if the Millennium Development Goals for young children and their families are to be fully met Despite this this volume demonstrates that those who work in this area continue to experience a deep concern for the well being of young children which transcends cultures frontiers and political and sectarian divides This book was originally published as a special issue of the International Journal of Early Years Education
