Ecohydrology in a Changing Environment Shavkat Kenjabaev, 2014-11-25. The complex of ecological problems in Central Asia, especially in Uzbekistan, is linked to rapid ongoing demographic and economic processes. However, geographical location has its own peculiarity. Aridity of the climate in Uzbekistan makes water resources a main limiting factor for sustainable economic development. Chub et al. 1998, RECCA 2011. Annual precipitation ranging from 80-200 mm in plain to 300-400 mm in foothills and 600-800 mm in mountain rangelands. Chub 2007 is considerably lower than the evaporation demand of the atmosphere. FAO, IPTRID et al. 2004. Thus, agriculture accounting about 90% withdrawal of total available water resources in Uzbekistan is impossible without irrigation. Qadir et al. 2009. Moreover, agricultural production is highly vulnerable to climate change. Lioubimtseva, Henebry 2009. High fluctuation of precipitation and temperature increase may influence land use in irrigated lands, create difficulties in water management at regional and local scales and increase competition of scarce water resources among water users in various sectors.

Ecological intensification involves using natural resources such as land, water, soil, nutrients and other biotic and abiotic variables in a sustainable way to achieve high performance and efficiency in agricultural yield with minimal damage to the agroecosystems. With increasing food demand, there is high pressure on agricultural systems. The concept of ecological intensification presents the mechanisms of ensuring high agricultural productivity by restoration of the soil health and landscape ecosystem services. The approach involves the replacement of anthropogenic inputs with eco-friendly and sustainable alternatives. Effective ecological intensification requires an understanding of ecosystems services, ecosystem's components and flow of resources in the agroecosystems. Also, awareness of land use patterns, socio-economic factors and needs of the farmer community plays a crucial role. It is therefore essential to understand the interaction of ecosystem constituents within the extensive agricultural landscape. The editors critically examined the status of ecological stress in agroecosystems and address the issue of ecological intensification for natural resources management. Drawing upon research and examples from around the world, the book is offering an up-to-date account and insight into the approaches that can be put in practice for poly-cropping systems and landscape scale management to increase the stability of agricultural production systems to achieve Ecological resilience. It further discusses the role of farmer communities and the importance of their awareness about the issues. This book will be of interest to
