

A Field of Beans

Objective

Students will learn the name and location of the origins of various legumes. Students will conduct scientific experiments with legumes. Students will use beans to solve various math equations. Students will learn about figurative language using expressions related to beans.

Background

Peas, beans and lentils are known as pulses and also as legumes. They are the seeds of plants belonging to the family Leguminosae, which gets its name from the characteristic pod, or legume, that protects the seeds while they are forming and ripening. With approximately 13,000 species, the family Leguminosae is the second largest in the plant kingdom.

Legumes provide us with food, medicines, oils, chemicals, timber, dyes and ornamental garden plants. Everywhere in the world people depend on legumes for food—and have for thousands of years.

All legumes grow in pods. That's where the word "legume" came from. Legume is the name for the pod covering the peas or beans. It splits into two valves with the seeds attached to the lower edge of one of the valves.

The Greeks and Romans used the broad bean for balloting. Black beans signified opposition, and white beans signified agreement. This custom carried over into England in the election of the king and queen for Twelfth Night and other celebrations and was taken to the New World colony at Massachusetts Bay, where Indian beans were used.

In Oklahoma we grow several varieties of legumes—some in our gardens, some in our fields, some to feed our animals and some to feed ourselves. Farmed legumes fall into two classes: forage and grain. Forage legumes, like alfalfa, clover and vetch, are sown in pasture and grazed by livestock. Grain legumes are cultivated for their seeds and are also called "pulses." The seeds are used for humans and animals to eat, for producing oils or for other industrial uses. Grain legumes include beans, lentils, lupins, peas and peanuts.

BLACK-EYED PEAS are a minor commodity in Oklahoma. Also called cowpea or southern peas, they have been Oklahoma's number one vegetable crop for several years. GARDEN PEAS are usually the first vegetable to be planted in home gardens, very early in the spring or late in the winter.
