Areas of Learning Basic to Lifelong Education P. Lengrand, 2016-05-27 The study of lifelong education brings to light aspects of education which go beyond the purely intellectual sphere into all dimensions of being. These dimensions assume great importance for individuals seeking to develop capacities which will enable them to cope successfully with the challenges they will confront throughout life and to participate constructively in the larger processes of development. The subjects covered include communication, corporal man, time space, art, man as citizen, the ethical domain, technology and the scientific spirit, and from these papers emerges the unifying theme of the interrelationship between morality and technology. This relationship poses the vital question of how individuals should decide which of the new technologies that proliferate in contemporary society is likely to be beneficial to humankind and which destructive. The book is the result of a collective project undertaken by the Unesco Institute of Education (UIE). The approach adopted is new in two respects: first, each theme is treated in terms of learning, and second, each is related to the others in a global and transdisciplinary view of personal development. It is written by experts from various countries who are known internationally for their outstanding contributions to research into the problems of learning as a basis for lifelong education and will be important reading for all those involved in the study and practice of lifelong education.

Encyclopedia of the Sciences of Learning Norbert M. Seel, 2011-10-05

Over the past century, educational psychologists and researchers have posited many theories to explain how individuals learn, i.e. how they acquire, organize, and deploy knowledge and skills. The 20th century can be considered the century of psychology on learning and related fields of interest such as motivation, cognition, metacognition, etc., and it is fascinating to see the various mainstreams of learning remembered and forgotten over the 20th century and note that basic assumptions of early theories survived several paradigm shifts of psychology and epistemology. Beyond folk psychology and its naïve theories of learning, psychological learning theories can be grouped into some basic categories such as behaviorist learning theories, connectionist learning theories, cognitive learning theories, constructivist learning theories, and social learning theories. Learning theories are not limited to psychology and related fields of interest but rather we can find the topic of learning in various disciplines such as philosophy and epistemology, education, information science, biology, and as a result of the emergence of computer technologies, especially also in the field of computer sciences and artificial intelligence. As a consequence, machine learning struck a chord in the 1980s and became an important field of the learning sciences in general. As the learning sciences became more specialized and complex, the various fields of interest were widely spread and separated from each other; as a consequence, even presently there is no comprehensive overview of the sciences of learning or the central theoretical concepts and vocabulary on which researchers rely. The Encyclopedia of the Sciences of Learning provides an up-to-date, broad, and authoritative coverage of the specific terms mostly used in the sciences of learning and its related fields, including relevant areas of instruction, pedagogy, cognitive sciences, and especially machine learning and knowledge engineering. This modern compendium will be an indispensable source of information for scientists, educators, engineers, and technical staff active in all fields of learning. More specifically, the Encyclopedia provides fast access to the most relevant theoretical terms provides up to date broad and authoritative coverage of the most important theories within the various fields of the learning sciences and adjacent sciences and communication technologies supplies clear and precise explanations of the theoretical terms cross references to related entries and up to date references to important research and publications The Encyclopedia also contains biographical entries of individuals who have substantially contributed to the sciences of learning the entries are written by a distinguished panel of researchers in the various fields of the learning sciences

The Three Fields of Global Political Economy Heikki Patomäki, 2022-03-10 The Three Fields of Global Political Economy provides a systematic and future oriented account of global political economy dynamics since the Industrial Revolution and argues that major changes and conflicting processes can be understood through the concept of these three fields The first field is constituted by the circuit of capital and is characterised by a tendency towards economic liberalism The second field is brought about by reactions to and learning from cycles and crises and various negative experiences The third field is the field of reason of state It is evoked by struggles within and among states and has its own inner generative structures This book analyses the generic dynamics of these three fields of global political economy and explores their most significant causal effects such as growth employment distribution of income and wealth wars and ecological effects Together the prevailing three fields as well as the ideas and causal forces which generate them constitute the holomovement of the global political economy This book will appeal to advanced students and scholars of global studies international relations international political economy economic theory and governance as well as those working in social theory and sociology and to a broader audience interested in socioeconomics

Advancing Higher Education as a Field of Study Sydney Freeman, Linda Serra Hagedorn, Lester Goodchild, Dianne Wright, 2023-07-03 Winner of the 2015 Auburn Authors Awards Where is higher education as a field of study going in this century How will higher education program leaders design and sustain their degree programs vitality in the face of perennial challenges from inside and outside the academy While in 1979 the Council for the Advancement of Standards in Higher Education CAS defined standards for student affairs master's level preparation and while 2010 saw the adoption of guidelines for higher education administration and leadership preparation programs at the master's degree level there still are however no guidelines that address higher education leadership doctoral programs despite increasing demands for assessment and evaluation This book suggests that higher education administration doctoral degree guidelines are a critical next step in advancing their program quality and continuity It offers a review of the field's history the condition of its higher education programs developments from the student affairs specialization and its guidelines and a multi chapter dialogue on the benefits or disadvantages of having guidelines At a time of urgency to prepare the next generation of higher education faculty and leaders this book sets out the parameters for the debate about what the guidelines should cover to ensure the appropriate and effective preparation of students It also offers a useful framework for enriching the knowledge of deans chairs program coordinators and faculty who are engaged in program design assessment and revision It will also be of interest to policymakers the personnel of accrediting agencies and not least graduate students within higher education preparation programs All the contributors to this volume have the exemplary expertise leadership experience and a close association with higher education guidelines and standards and have extensively contributed to the literature on higher education
