

of the Illinois Department of Corrections out Felton, he told me that for eight years conduct has been good—roughly the same help for his mental health problems. He eventually wanted to do other he's interested d he wanted to become a counselor. The study to take my GED [high school diploma] statistics show that prisoners who have are less likely to return to prison, it helps
- honored and I told that to the prison official.
The woman in charge of counseling apm and asked, "Why can't he study for a warden responded, to my amazement, "We Illinois prisons to study for the GED?"
- cause encouraging prisoners to study for a will save lives and money for Illinois.
- my visit, I've talked to an aide to my Barack Obama, the chair of the state's jurisdiction, about this. I believe we will
- all because one prisoner and one woman me. It would have been easy for both of es, "Why waste my time on a letter?"
." Instead they acted, and Illinois prisoners te as a result.

ne experienced observer notes "What getting things done] is the mistake that is a committed public stand, or a hero
- a larger-than-life figure—someone with courage, vision, or knowledge that we er possess."<sup>25</sup> It's the little thing with difference.

sarah Maurer is another example of somete thing that may result in something down the road. She bought a copy of a book I wrote, Freedom's Champion: Elijah Lovejoy. It's the story of a leader of the anti-slave-ry movement before the Civil War who was killed by a mob for his strong stand. It's the most exciting book I've written.

- result, few people have ever heard of Elijah Lovejoy. As a
- nator and former Illinois governor Adlai Stevenson before his death, he said, "Someone should make a movie out of that story." I agreed, but I don't know anything about the film business, so I did nothing to pursue the idea.

Deborah Maurer also doesn't know anything about the film business. She lives in Freeburg, Illinois, a small suburban/rural community of about four thousand citizens, and works for American Water Works in Alton, Illinois. After reading my Lovejoy book she came to the same conclusion as Adlai Stevenson. She talked to her father in Los Angeles, and repeated—with conviction—the idea about making a movie. Her father, John Townsend, isn't in the movie business either, but one day while eating in a small restaurant in Los Angeles, he noticed another patron busily working on a document. "He's nosy," Deborah says with a laugh, describing her father. Townsend asked the gentleman what he did. It turned out the hard-working person was screenwriter Ken O'Donnell. Townsend told him about his daughter's movie idea. O'Donnell gave Townsend his business card and told him to have his daughter contact him, never expecting much to happen out of it. Deborah bought another copy of the book and sent it to O'Donnell. The screenwriter's version is that Townsend "bugged me for five minutes and I agreed to look at the book." Now O'Donnell is working on a script for a movie, he signed a contract with my publisher for movie rights, and maybe—still a maybe—a movie will be produced that can influ-ence people in our nation and other nations about race relations and free speech. If it happens, credit will go to Deborah Maurer
