Field Manual For The Investigation Of Fish Kills:

Field Manual for the Investigation of Fish Kills Fred P. Meyer, Lee A. Barclay, 1990 Fish kills are graphic evidence of serious problems in a lake or stream. If the kill is related to the presence of toxic chemicals, there may be human health concerns in addition to the obvious damage to the ecosystem and the fisheries resources. Depending on the cause of a fish kill, legal and economic ramifications may be involved. If the kill is caused by human or corporate actions, litigation is likely to follow with possible court awarded damages and assessed costs for cleanup and restoration. This manual is intended to help fisheries biologists and others to prepare for a fish kill investigation. Field Manual for the Investigation of Fish Kills Fred P. Meyer, Lee A. Klemm, 1993 Water-resources Investigations Report, 1998 The Wildlife Techniques Manual Nova J. Silvy, 2012-03 A standard text in a variety of courses, the Techniques Manual as it is commonly called, covers every aspect of modern wildlife management and provides practical information for applying the hundreds of methods described in its pages. To effectively incorporate the explosion of new information in the wildlife profession, this latest edition is logically organized into a two volume set. Volume 1 is devoted to research techniques and Volume 2 focuses on management methodologies. Resource Publication, 1992 Trends and Management of Wolf-livestock Conflicts in Minnesota Steven H. Fritts, 1992 The nature and extent of wolf livestock conflicts in Minnesota during 1975-86 was studied as part of a wolf depredation control program. The level of wolf Canis lupus depredation on livestock in Minnesota as determined from the total number of complaints verified annually during 1975-86 showed a slight upward trend but did not increase significantly. A significant portion of the annual variation in verified complaints, perhaps the best index on severity of the depredation problem, was explained by variation in severity of the winter before the depredation season. Inverse relation. The addition of a time variable did not account for a significant portion of the remaining variation. Verified complaints of depredations averaged 30 per year, affecting an average of 21 farms. 0-33% of producers annually. Conflicts were highly seasonal and involved primarily cattle, mainly calves, sheep, and domestic turkeys. Annual variation in losses of sheep and turkeys was higher than for cattle. In recent years, sheep and turkey losses in two northwestern counties have increased. Preventive control may be warranted in those areas. Site specific trapping and removal of wolves in response to depredations was the primary control method, resulting in captures of 437 wolves in 12 depredation seasons For the wolf range as a whole no relation was found between wolf removal and subsequent depredation rates however wolf removal seemed to reduce depredations locally at some farms When adults and yearlings were removed no subsequent losses occurred in about 55% of instances removal of young of the year reduced losses in 22% Removal of breeding wolves did not reduce the incidence of subsequent losses more than removal of nonbreeding adults and yearlings did The low number of conflicts for 1975-86 was remarkable considering the frequent contact between wolves and livestock However an update of complaints for 1987-89 revealed a definite upward trend in depredations Epilogue Improvements in farm management practices may reduce the present number of conflicts

Selection of Prey by Walleyes in the Ohio Waters of the Central Basin of Lake Erie, 1985-1987 David R. Wolfert, Michael T. Bur, 1992 Walleyes were collected at five locations in the central basin of Lake Erie in the period 1985 to 1987 The contents of the fishes stomachs were examined to identify the species of prey The seasonal availability of potential prey was determined with sampling with trawl tows Food electivity indexes for young of the year and older walleyes were calculated Prey selection by walleyes in the central basin was species specific irrespective of abundance of prey
