Postsouthern Sense of Place in Contemporary Fiction Martyn Bone, 2014-01-13 For generations southern novelists and critics have grappled with a concept that is widely seen as a trademark of their literature a strong attachment to geography or a sense of place In the 1930s the Agrarians accorded special meaning to rural life particularly the farm in their definitions of southern identity For them the South seemed an organic and rooted region in contrast to the North where real estate development and urban sprawl evoked a faceless raw capitalism By the end of the twentieth century however economic and social forces had converged to create a modernized South How have writers responded to this phenomenon Is there still a sense of place in the South or perhaps a distinctly postsouthern sense of place Martyn Bone innovatively draws upon postmodern thinking to consider the various perspectives that southern writers have brought to the concept of place and to look at its fate in a national and global context He begins with a revisionist assessment of the Agrarians who failed in their attempts to turn their proprietary ideal of the small farm into actual policy but whose broader rural aesthetic lived on in the work of neo Agrarian writers including William Faulkner and Eudora Welty By the 1950s adherence to this aesthetic was causing southern writers and critics to lose sight of the social reality of a changing South Bone turns to more recent works that do respond to the impact of capitalist spatial development on the South and on the nation generally including that self declared international city Atlanta Close readings of novels by Robert Penn Warren Walker Percy Richard Ford Anne Rivers Siddons Tom Wolfe and Toni Cade Bambara illuminate evolving ideas about capital land labor and class while introducing southern literary studies into wider debates around social cultural and literary geography Bone concludes his remarkably rich book by considering works of Harry Crews and Barbara Kingsolver that suggest the southern sense of place may be not only post Agrarian or postsouthern but also transnational

Katz, 2012-05-25 At 1 27 on the morning of August 4 2005 Herbert Manes fatally stabbed Robert Monroe known as Shorty in a dispute over five dollars It was a horrific yet mundane incident for the poor heavily African American neighborhood of North Philadelphia one of seven homicides to occur in the city that day and yet not make the major newspapers For Michael B Katz an urban historian and a juror on the murder trial the story of Manes and Shorty exemplified the marginalization social isolation and indifference that plague American cities Introduced by the gripping narrative of this murder and its circumstances Why Don't American Cities Burn charts the emergence of the urban forms that underlie such events Katz traces the collision of urban transformation with the rightward moving social politics of late twentieth and early twenty first century America He shows how the bifurcation of black social structures produced a new African American inequality and traces the shift from images of a pathological black underclass to praise of the entrepreneurial poor who take advantage of new technologies of poverty work to find the beginning of the path to the middle class He explores the reasons American cities since the early 1970s have remained relatively free of collective violence while black men in bleak inner city neighborhoods have turned their rage inward on one another rather than on the agents and symbols of a culture and political economy that exclude them The book ends with a meditation on how the political left and right have come to believe that urban transformation is inevitably one of failure and decline abetted by the response of government to deindustrialization poverty and race How Katz asks can we construct a new narrative that acknowledges the dark side of urban history even as it demonstrates the capacity of government to address the problems of cities and their residents How can we create a politics of modest hope
