Business as a Human Enterprise David Newkirk, 2009 There is a malaise in the business academy with much noise but not much change This essay suggests an underlying cause of the current difficulties We argue the challenges facing management scholarship and education grow out of a fundamental misunderstanding of the nature of business itself Much of current research and teaching treats business as a deterministic phenomenon and management as a science Business is a thoroughly human institution However business schools and business scholars rarely recognize this However this perspective creates a great opportunity First and most importantly it lets us correct many of the problems identified in the modern critiques of management scholarship and education More importantly by embracing business as a human institution and leadership as a creative act we can begin the long overdue task of building bridges between our business schools and the rest of the academy We can find multiple useful lenses through which business leaders and academics can view business activities And a portion of our colleagues can continue to pursue their scientific agenda should they choose In this paper we engage in a brief stylized history of the business academy primarily in the United States where it finds its most dominant form and historically its largest audience We juxtapose this history with the tremendous changes that have occurred in business over the last 40 50 years and suggest that the time is ripe for change Next we examine several recent critiques and demonstrate that they rest on a faulty and outmoded view of business We use the thinking underlying stakeholder theory to frame the arguments showing we need a new approach most easily characterized as business as a human activity We suggest two central questions and four problems that business education must place front and center We then begin to discuss how we might draw on all of the disciplines of the academy for a more robust and useful view of business and more powerful portfolio of research and educational tools

Ofsted a case in the mismanagement of the standards of education in England John Igbino,2014-04-23 Project Report from the year 2014 in the subject Pedagogy School System Educational and School Politics language English abstract This book reports on a research project which was carried out between 2002 and 2013 The focus of the research was the Office for Standards in Education Children s Services and Skills Ofsted and its education and training and development programmes for inspectors Claims and disputes The Office for Standards in Education Children s Services and Skills Ofsted defines itself as the statutory watchdog for the preservation and management of the standard of education in England And by its own accounts Ofsted has claimed firstly that it is the promoter and upholder high standard of educational achievements

secondly that it is the bulwark against weak teaching and weak leadership management and governance and thirdly that it is the champion and protector of the interests of the constituents of education in England Ofsted 2012 4 This research does not dispute the fact that the above claims came with the provisions of the Education schools Act 1992 and the Education and Inspection Act 2006 and that the Act delegated the statutory duties to inspect evaluate and judge and report on the standard of education in England to Ofsted Instead the research is disputing Ofsted s claims as follows firstly the research disputes the extent to which Ofsted has achieved the statutory duties delegated to it under the provisions of the 1992 and 2006 Acts And secondly the research is questioning whether in its current structure Ofsted is fit for purpose and whether Ofsted and a significant proportion of its inspectors have the operational and intellectual capabilities to continue to inspect specific educational remits and to evaluate and judge and report on the standard of education in England Thus the research has advanced the following arguments against Ofsted s and its inspectors capabilities and fitness for purpose the first argument is that there are incompetent inspectors within the ranks of Ofsted inspectors The research has found that 30% of practicing Ofsted inspectors do not have the skills and competencies required to successfully achieve Ofsted s performance criteria for inspectors particularly in the collection analysis evaluation assessment and interpretation of evidence in the three principal aspects of Ofsted s judgements The three aspects in question are Outcomes for Learners Teaching Learning and Assessment and Leadership and Management The second argument is that there
