kind of education which poetry alone can give does not grow less as knowledge advances and the claims of other studies threaten more and more to absorb attention No apology is required therefore for turning to school use the best collection that has been made or is likely to be made of the English and Scottish lyric poetry of the eighteenth century Some defence however may be looked for from the commentator who has the presumption to seem to stand between the poets and their reader Perhaps he would be thought to quibble if he met the charge with a denial of the fact and urged that in literal truth he comes in these pages after the poets and not before them Such is indeed the place he wishes to occupy to be read after the poems and in no case until the poem commented upon has been read with care and intelligence If this defence be insufficient he can only repeat what he has said already in the similar edition of Book Fourth that he does here in his Preface honestly warn the student that the text is the one thing of importance About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
