Yuhl, 2006-03-08 Charleston South Carolina today enjoys a reputation as a destination city for cultural and heritage tourism In A Golden Haze of Memory Stephanie E Yuhl looks back to the crucial period between 1920 and 1940 when local leaders developed Charleston's trademark image as America's Most Historic City Eager to assert the national value of their regional cultural traditions and to situate Charleston as a bulwark against the chaos of modern America these descendants of old line families downplayed Confederate associations and emphasized the city's colonial and early national prominence They created a vibrant network of individual artists literary figures and organizations such as the all white Society for the Preservation of Negro Spirituals that nurtured architectural preservation art literature and tourism while appropriating African American folk culture In the process they translated their selective and idiosyncratic personal familial and class memories into a collective identity for the city The Charleston this group built Yuhl argues presented a sanitized yet highly marketable version of the American past Their efforts invited attention and praise from outsiders while protecting social hierarchies and preserving the political and economic power of whites Through the example of this colorful southern city Yuhl posits a larger critique about the use of heritage and demonstrates how something as intangible as the recalled past can be transformed into real political economic and social power
