There is increasing dissatisfaction among both specialists and patients with hospital based antenatal care and a recurrent finding in lay comments about obstetric care has been satisfaction with general practice and midwife involvement General practitioners themselves are beginning to realize that the antenatal and postnatal period of a woman's life is very central to their role as family doctors Two recent reports in the UK have concluded that specialist antenatal and postnatal care should on the whole be concentrated on high risk patients and that the vast majority of care could and should be done by community based primary health care teams Thus all general practitioners need to update and reassess their antenatal puerperial and postnatal care Both reports recommended greater use of existing general practice delivery facilities and that all specialist units should provide facilities for general practitioners to look after their own patients in labour The general practitioner emphasis must be on normalizing obstetrics where possible and most importantly responding to the women's requests and suggestions This book will fire the enthusiasm of all GPs with an interest in obstetrics There are contributions from many disciplines including GPs specialists health visitors and midwives Recent Advances in Perinatology Kazuo Maeda, Kazuo Okuyama, Yoshihiko Takeda, 1986 Having a Baby in Europe, 1985 A who perinatal study group was set up in 1979 to study and report on the issues surrounding birth care in Europe and this is their final report They describe and review the official services the alternative services and the information and evaluation services Information gleaned ranged from systems of birth and death registrations patterns of antenatal visits and provision of intensive care services to who is allowed to be present during a birth and what tests and procedures are administered routinely The variation in the rates for many procedures from country to country without any resultant variation in mortality or morbidity rates shows that the use of many of them could be usefully reviewed Based on these findings the final chapter summarizes the present state of services for women and their babies during pregnancy and birth and following birth and analyses present trends and future needs The East African Medical Journal, 1989 Memoirs of the Museum of Anthropology, University of Michigan University of Michigan.
