Governing Global Networks Mark W. Zacher, Brent A. Sutton, 1996
Governing Global Networks argues that most international regimes are grounded in states mutual cooperation and not in the dictates of the most powerful states It focuses on the regimes for four important international industries shipping air transport telecommunications and postal services Of particular importance to these regimes have been states interests in both the free flow of commerce and their policy autonomy The authors examine the relationship between these potentially conflicting goals In particular they trace the impact of deregulation which has led some states increasingly to place gains from economic openness ahead of their desire to maintain a high degree of control of their own economies and to the decline of the traditional cartel elements of these regimes This analysis is an important contribution to theoretical debates between neo realists and neo liberals in the study of international organisations and international political economy
