little noise as possible to the muzzle of my gun and gradually drawing out the ramrod tried with my right arm stretched out to stir up the embers so that I might see but here again a new danger presented itself I was exposing myself as a mark to a ball or an arrow without the chance of defending myself for the light would show me to the enemy before I could see my object but there was no alternative and something must be done Between hope and despair I managed to stir up the ashes so that I could see little Weasel running to and fro to the cellar door I concluded that the enemy must be skulking in the cellar I then but not without difficulty got a candle lighted Holding the candle in my left hand I laid hold of my pistol With the lynx eye and wary step of a cat ready to pounce on its prey I advanced rather obliquely with my right arm stretched out at full length holding the cocked pistol till I got to the cellar door the little dog all the while making a furious noise when lo what was there but a skunk sitting on a roll of tobacco The shot blew it almost to atoms and so delicately perfumed everything in the house that I was scarcely able to live in it for days

Koochiching Hiram M. Drache, 1883 Discover one of the last frontiers in the contiguous 48 states which were heralded as a great agricultural Garden of Eden A divergent ethnic composition long and severe winters a short growing season and muskeg swamps intensified the problems of this isolated frontier But the natural forest and abundance of waterpower helped shape the area s history The author focuses on pioneers who settled within a 60 70 miles on the northern border of Minnesota in an area extending from Baudette on the west to Kettle Falls on the east Realizing that this would be some of the last free land the pioneers had hopes that were probably greater than on earlier frontiers
