

FINGER PICKING GUITAR TECHNIQUES

STEFAN GROSSMAN'S STUDY INTO BLUES AND RAGTIME GUITAR
PERSONAL INSTRUCTOR 18/AMSCO MUSIC PUBLISHING COMPANY

PRICE IN USA $7.95

This album is a combination of many things. Hopefully it will be an enjoyable experience. Combined with the tablature transcriptions of the tunes, the students can learn more about various finger-picking techniques.

I have used some of the more popular tunes associated with finger-picking techniques. In some cases I have composed new pieces to show the lessons I think important to guitar students. The songs are included as instrumentals, as I am more equipped to play the guitar parts than to sing the vocals. It would take a student just as long to learn the many vocal phrasings and textures as to learn the guitar arrangements. I thought it best to do one thing at a time.

There are 18 tunes presented. They cover the five major keys used in finger-picking. Of course, there are exceptions. There are one or two popular instrumentals in the key of F but these will be discussed with other advanced techniques in a future book.

Our study begins in the key of G and an introduction to the alternating bass style:

OH PAPA

Key of G.

I first heard Pat Kilgus perform this tune. He had picked it up from Elizabeth Cotton. It is a children's lullaby. It is a very simple piece that uses a G chord as its base. Around this position the melody is played on the twelfth strings, while an alternating bass jumps from the sixth to fourth strings. The only advanced position comes when I have marked 'D' on the second line of the staff. When the previous chord position is moved back one fret. (This is the third fret sixth string, second twelfth string and third first-third strings) Around this D chord the tune is continued. This position is not strictly speaking a D chord. In fact if you strum this position you will find it quite dissonant. This is an example of how we can make up chord positions to fit our needs in finger-picking. Another version of this song was based on Elizabeth Cotton's first Folio LP.

SHAKE THAT THING

When I first put together my Country Blues Guitar book I used "Shake That Thing" as the first piece. At that time I was expecting to see it covered on records as performed by Blind Legend John Hurt. Unfortunately, it has never been issued. Since that time I discovered another version of the same tune by a touring lute player of the twenties called Papa Charlie Jackson. Papa Charlie was one of the most popular race artists and minstrel show entertainers and bluesmen of his material. The version presented on this disc is a combination of the guitar part John Hurt taught me and the lyrics of Papa Charlie.

The tune is played completely around a G chord. The bass alternates from sixth to fourth strings and the melody is played within the twelfth strings. The only tricky section comes at the end of the second line of tablature at the third line of staff. This is a variation of the alternating bass that gives an another texture. You should enjoy playing this tune.

EAST COLORADO BLUES

Our last piece in the key of G is a continuation of the study presented in "Oh Papa" and "Shake That Thing". Again the whole tune is played around a G chord and the bass alternates from the sixth to fourth strings. But in this tune we add a slight counter-point to our bass so that we are playing an open twelfth string and then the second fret of the twelfth string within our alternating bass pattern. This gives the piece a distinct flavor and feel. Last year the piece was a tune arranged after Colorado bluesman Mississippi John Hurt's "Spidey Drive's Moon" and Leadbelly's "Old Man With Your Dog Catch A Rabbit". It is a traditional melody that is found in many bluesmen's repertoires. Ray Gary Davis had two such pieces similar to this. One was called "Sheddy Is Around" and the other "Lost John". Chords in these can be studied in Blues Guitar of Ray Gary Davis-Oak Park, due for publication September 1980.

I suggest you try to hear John Hurt's "Spidey Drive's Moon" (either his 1928 version or his more recent Vanguard recording) as well as Leadbelly's "Old Man With Your Dog Catch A Rabbit".

"East Colorado Blues" will be a challenge to master and also a challenge to play in the right mood. The guitar is played at the sixth fret.

DEATH COMES CREEPING

Key of D.
This is one of the most popular gospel tunes played on the guitar. Charles Patton arranged a version called "Oh Death". Marion Linscott recorded a version in open D major. I have marked a dropped D string to arrange my version. In this tuning the guitar has the sixth string tuned down to a D note. The guitar is tuned D A D G B E.

This arrangement is based around two positions. The first is a regular D position. The second has our index finger on the fifth fret sixth string and middle finger on the sixth fret second string. This sixth fret-second string was chosen in order to give a blues feel to the playing. The only additional position to the playing is a C chord in the sixth line of the staff. Here we use our fourth finger on the fifth fret sixth string and index finger on the third fret-second string.

One of the tricks to play this tune is to select the proper bass notes. You can hear this clearly in the introduction. The fourth string is hit hard enough so that the twelfth strings can pick up sound while playing a D chord (sympathetic vibrations).

SEE SEE RIDER

This is Mississippi John Hurt's version of the famous blues "See Saw Rider". It is played in regular tuning in the key of D. It is a complicated piece but I think practice will get you to play it. There are no unusual chord positions. A, D, G and A2 are used.

As in all the previous tunes an alternating bass is used. Try to hear John's version on his double "live" Vanguard LP.

BLUES AIN'T DRY

This is an original version of a chord progression that has been used for many blues tunes. Perhaps most popular among these is the song "Keys To The Highway" by Big Bill Broonzy. John Hurt also had a version entitled "Crying Dicks".

Usually this type of piece is played in the key of E. I thought it interesting if we could have two versions of this progression, so I have included one version in D and another in E (Delta Crossroads).

The opening D position has our index finger on the fifth fret sixth string and middle finger on fourth fret-second string. This makes comfortable on the seventh fret-second string.

Here the alternating bass is conducted with four frets.
