Blank, 1996-09-27

When Finland joined the European Union EU in 1995 it completed a fundamental transformation of its security policy Until the end of the Cold War Finland's position in Europe derived from its treaty with the Soviet Union which imposed neutrality upon it and debarred Finland from any security cooperation with Scandinavia Western Europe and the United States The end of the Cold War and the fall of the Soviet Union allowed Finland to move towards European integration through the EU while preserving its own independent defense posture Other reasons for moving towards the EU stemmed from Finland's new economic vulnerability to trends in the European economy and its determination that current security challenges no longer included the Cold War threat of military invasion Rather current dangers involved the risk of a collapse of Russia's social or political infrastructure which could then confront Helsinki with challenges that it could not meet alone Therefore Finland needed to find ways of associating with other states to meet those nonmilitary challenges and at the same time terminate its erstwhile political isolation by participating in European integration It chose the EU over the North Atlantic Treaty Organization NATO because the expansion of NATO to its border would have alarmed Moscow and because Helsinki viewed the threats to Europe as being essentially nonmilitary and thus outside NATO's mandate or purview Also as Finland emerged from the Cold War it found itself exposed to severe economic dislocations if not crises that forced integration upon both it and Sweden whose international economic lead Finland had to follow But by opting for EU and European integration Finland stimulated fears at home that it was abandoning its reliance on self defense and chasing what might prove to be an elusive form of indirect political guarantees in future crises Other domestic groups worried that Finland might be drawn into European crises of others making where it had no say in decisionmaking since it was outside the EU's Common Foreign and Security Policy CFSP As a result the decision to join the EU forced a major domestic debate which was won in 1994 by supporters of membership and which also led to publication of a White Paper on Finnish security in 1995 The Finnish Government published the 1995 White Paper to educate Finnish elites and masses as to the purposes behind Finland's policy and in order to give it a formal public statement The White Paper retains Finland's commitment to independent defense It also reflects Finland's support for a strengthened EU WEU capability for crisis management peace operations and for dealing with the challenges posed by Russia's current crisis The White Paper lists the threats that could engage Finland due to Russia's crisis These threats pertain mainly to the possible breakdown of socio-political order in Russia the consequences of which would rapidly spread towards Finland and the Baltic states while overwhelming those states' ability to confront those challenges The White Paper both reaffirmed and carried forward the policy perspectives that had developed in 1992 1994 as Finland prepared for accession to the EU It also reflected Finnish policymakers' belief that EU membership opened the way to overcome Finland's prior political isolation and even attain indirect security guarantees At the same time Finland preserved its independent defense capability

Finnish Security and European Security Policy Stephen J. Blank, 2013-02-03 In 1992 Finland applied to join the European Union EU It formally entered the EU 3 years later This decision to join the EU reflected several fundamental changes in Finnish policy By applying to and joining the EU Finland renounced the Cold War policy of neutrality imposed by the 1948 Fenno-Soviet Treaty of Friendship Cooperation and Mutual Assistance FCMA and embraced integration with Europe Membership in the EU also represents Finland's newly gained ability to think about its security in broader terms than from 1944 when the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics USSR defeated Finland and compelled it to leave World War II until 1991 when the Soviet Union fell apart From 1944 1991 defense and security were almost synonymous in Finnish thinking policy focused almost solely upon not provoking Moscow Issues of economic security and economic integration with Europe had relatively little significance for Helsinki compared to the need to define a working relationship with Moscow and safeguard Finnish independence Once the Soviet Union collapsed and the Cold War ended Helsinki sought to defend Finnish independence by joining Europe Finnish goals were to obtain more freedom of action a broader sense of security and political support from the EU and more generally from the West Finland's strategic importance to Russia Scandinavia and the Baltic littoral imparts considerable relevance to its evolving outlook on European security therefore Helsinki's thinking merits serious attention abroad Thus the evolution of Finnish views from the time it applied to the EU 1992 to the present has considerable significance for both regional security in the Baltic and for European security more generally The decision to join the EU resulted from both a long internal debate and the changed international situation at the end of the Cold War To grasp Finland's policies we must examine the decision to join the EU its internal debate and what Finland hopes to gain from joining its views on European integration and security organizations i.e. the Western European Union WEU and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization NATO the future of European security and Finnish policy towards Russia and the Baltic states

Finnish Security and European Security Policy , Finland's Security in a Changing Europe Risto E. J. Penttilä, 1994 Finland in the European Union Tapio Raunio, Teija Tiilikainen, 2003 With a focus on governmental institutions this book explores the ways in which EU membership has altered the balance of power among key political actors

The authors discuss cultural adaptation to integration as well as examining the views of the elite and voters The transformation in national identity sovereignty and neutrality are also examined Waking the Neighbour Keir Giles, Susanna Eskola, 2009 Because of both history and geography the Finnish relationship with Russia is unique in Europe At the same time the Finnish perception of Russia as a source of security challenges is acute Finland is engaged in a debate over whether it would be desirable to seek membership of NATO in order to mitigate these challenges A full and frank debate has been difficult because it is constrained by a range of political and societal taboos nevertheless there are indicators that a move toward NATO is not impossible in the foreseeable future If Finland were to opt for joining NATO this would register in Russian defence and security thinking as a serious concern Unlike the Baltic accession in 2004 the response from the newly assertive Russia could potentially be swift and damaging This would also have implications for Russian relations with the EU of which Finland has been a member since 1995 Many in Finland see the EU as a security provider and there is confusion in the national debate between EU or Nordic security policy cooperation and an actual defensive alliance Finland's NATO argument is a complex and multi faceted one made even more so by regional and cultural specifics but it needs to be understood because its result could have a major impact on Russia's relationships with both NATO and the EU Page i

FINNISH SECURITY AND EUROPEAN SECURITY POLICY. Stephen J. Blank, 2022 Finland and Europe T. C. Archer, J. M. Huru, Economic and Social Research Council, 1997 Finland's Security Solution in the Future Petri Mattila, 2013 Finland's current security strategy will not prove beneficial for the nation without profound and concrete changes Nordic and EU cooperation have been presented as alternatives to NATO membership The complexity of taking into account the public opinion Finnish political relation and the economic relations of both to Russia and the EU is point of the equation As an EU member state it cannot ignore any of these factors and it has to reconsider its foreign and security policy to coordinate the upcoming decisions over the European security arrangements This paper examines different strategic security possibilities for Finland 1 to rely on EU resources as a primary means for national security 2 to rely on NATO capabilities and 3 to rely on Nordic cooperation The solution can also be a practical combination of all three This paper concludes with recommendations based on consequences of each option Government Report on Changes in the Security Environment Finland. Ministry for Foreign Affairs of Finland, 2022 Following Russia's invasion of Ukraine a fundamental change has taken place in the security and operating environment of Finland and Europe This Government report to Parliament assesses changes in the operating and security environment and the effects of the changed security situation on the economy resilience security of supply internal security cyber security hybrid influence activities and critical infrastructure The report complements the Government Report on Finnish Foreign and Security Policy Government Defence Report Government Report on Internal Security and Government Report on EU Policy Maintaining national room to manoeuvre and freedom of choice remain integral parts of Finland's foreign security and defence policy Finland retains the option of joining a military alliance and applying for NATO membership Finland conducts its human rights based foreign and security policy consistently and emphasises the importance of the international rules based order and compliance with international law The report examines the development of national defence capability the European Union as a security policy actor and closer bilateral cooperation with Sweden Norway other Nordic countries the United States and the United Kingdom and multilateral defence cooperation initiatives Closer cooperation with NATO and the effects of Finland s possible NATO membership are also assessed In response to the changed security situation Finland will continue active and proactive diplomacy strengthen its defence capability and intensify cooperation with key partners The importance to Finland s security of maintaining resilience in society national defence and internal security is highlighted
