

FIRE IN THE MINDS OF MEN

Origins of the Revolutionary Faith

James H. Billington

With a new introduction by the author

This book traces the origins of a faith—perhaps the faith of the century. Billington is interested not in social forms, but in human forms—the intellectual creation of a new tradition. His historical focus extends from the writing of the French Revolution in the late eighteenth century to the beginnings of the Russian Revolution in the early twentieth century. Billington claims with considerable evidence that revolutionary ideologies were not shaped so much by the critical rationalism of the French Enlightenment as by the mystical and proto-scientific notions of Germany. A consideration of social theory in political practice was essentially the work of three Russian revolutionaries: in 1901, 1917, and November 1917. These events on the stage of the European world brought a new sense about revolution out of the wilderness and great notions of human destiny into the hands of men.

Though his book begins about the birth of revolutionary dogma, Billington approaches and identifies with the goals of the best spiritual people who passed through great and unknown dangers: intellectual, spiritual, physical, and gender. Considerable stress is especially apparent. The New Yorker called this book an "enormous, learned and lively" while The New Yorker noted that Billington "paid great attention to the lives and emotions of individuals and that makes his book absorbing." It is an important work of history and a major contribution to our understanding of political life.

"Fire in the Minds of Men is a brilliant and fascinating book." —Marshall Berman, New York Times Book Review

"A major contribution to the history of Europe's political culture of ideas." —Hugh Seton-Watson, The Observer Review

James H. Billington is executive Librarian of Congress. Before then, he served as director of the American Library for Cultural and Creative Activities. He served as chief librarian of the Board of Trade University, which became the College of Arts. He is the author of Millennium of America's Progress, The Arts and the American Historical Society of America's Library, and The Arts of America as well as the FBI chairman's report "The Future of Russia."
