Rapid Decision Making on the Fire Ground Gary A. Klein, Roberta Calderwood, Anne Clinton-Cirocco, 1988 The objective of this study was to examine the way in which decisions are made by highly proficient personnel under conditions of extreme time pressure and where the consequences of the decisions could affect lives and property The domain of firefighting was selected and the search focused on the decisions made by Fire Ground Commanders FGCs who are responsible for allocating personnel and resources at the scene of a fire The method used included aspects of critical incident and protocol analysis paradigms Interviews were conducted with 26 experienced fire fighters mean amount of experience 23 years Each interview covered a critical incident that was non routine and demanded expertise In this way the FGCs handled decision points without any need to consider more than one option A Recognition Primed Decision RPD model was synthesized from these data which emphasized the use of recognition rather than calculation or analysis for rapid decision making sdw Abstract
