US Flamethrower Tanks of World War II Steven J. Zaloga, 2013-10-20 The US Army and Marine Corps experimented with a wide range of flame thrower tanks through World War II in both the European and Pacific theaters Although the US Army deployment of flame thrower tanks in the ETO was problematic at best flamethrowers were much more widely used in the Pacific theater and became ubiquitous by 1945 including an entire Army flamethrower tank battalion on Okinawa in 1945 the largest single use of flamethrower tanks in World War II This will cover the initial attempts at the use of auxiliary flamethrowers by both the US Army and Marine Corps in 1943 the standardized adoption of the Satan flamethrower tank by the Marines in 1944 the development of main gun flamethrowers by the Marines and US Army based on the POA CWS designs and the myriad other types tested in combat including the powerful LVT 4 design using Navy flamethrowers at Peleliu in 1944 Due to the extensive Japanese use of fortifications in the final year of the Pacific war Flamethrower tanks became one of the most important solutions in American tactics

Department, 2013-10-01 The M2 2 flamethrower was an American portable backpack incendiary device that was used in World War II It was the successor to the M1 and M1A1 flamethrowers and offered improved reliability and a more efficient ignition system than previous models It had a burn time of around seven seconds and the flame was effective out to around thirty three meters In 1944 the M2 2 flamethrower was introduced into service It was first used in combat in Guam and was thereafter employed in all Pacific campaigns Flamethrowers proved highly effective in fighting against the Japanese especially in routing defenders from caves pillboxes and underground emplacements The arrival of flamethrowing tanks which offered personnel protection and more firepower lessened the Army's interest in and tactical use of portable flamethrowers The M2 was upgraded for use during the Korean War M2A1 2 and Vietnam War M2A1 7 and eventually replaced by the lightweight M9A1 7 However these were shelved after 1978 when the Department of Defense unilaterally stopped using flamethrowers on the grounds that they are inhumane and have little combat value Created in 1944 this field manual reveals a great deal about the M2 2's design and capabilities Intended as a training manual for those charged with operation and maintenance it details many aspects of its controls tools and accessories Originally labeled restricted this manual was declassified long ago and is here reprinted in book form Care has been taken to preserve the integrity of the text
