Chemical Signals in Vertebrates 10 R.T.

Mason, Michael P. Lemaster, Dietland Müller-Schwarze, 2006-11-09. The editors and contributors to this volume should be justifiably proud of their participation in the tenth triennial meeting of the Chemical Signals in Vertebrates International Symposium. This meeting was held 27 years after the initial gathering of participants in Saratoga Springs New York from June 6 to 9 1976. Subsequent meetings have been held every three years in Syracuse New York, Sarasota Florida, Laramie Wyoming, Oxford England, Philadelphia Pennsylvania, Tübingen Germany, Ithaca New York and Krakow Poland. This tenth anniversary symposium was held from July 29 through August 1 in Corvallis Oregon and was hosted by the Zoology Department and Biology Programs of Oregon State University. This book also represents the tenth in a series of books on chemical communication, chemical ecology, olfactory and vomeronasal research in vertebrate species. The species covered in the chapters herein range from fish to mammals including humans. By taxonomic breakdown the mammals are the most represented in number of species and chapter contributions. However the hosts of the meeting endeavored to have some representative contributions covering all of the major vertebrate taxa. As in past years the meeting was well represented with just over 100 participants from 13 different nations. Plenary talks focused on some of the non mammalian groups that have tended to be less represented in these symposia. Thus we had a very nice overview of comparisons and contrasts of invertebrate chemical communication to vertebrate systems.

People and the Environment

, 2003. People and the Environment: Approaches for Linking Household and Community Surveys to Remote Sensing and GIS appeals to a wide range of natural social and spatial scientists with interests in conducting population and environment research and thereby characterizing a land use and land cover dynamics through remote sensing, b) demographic and socio economic variables through household and community surveys and c) local site and situation through resource endowments, geographical accessibility and connections of people to place through GIS. Case studies are used to examine theories and practices useful in linking people and the environment. We also describe land use and land cover dynamics and the associated social, biophysical and geographical drivers of change articulated through human environment interactions. People and the Environment: Approaches for Linking Household and Community Surveys to Remote Sensing and GIS addresses a need for a comprehensive and rigorous treatment of linking across thematic domains e.g. social, biophysical and geographical and across space and time scales for research and study within the context of human environment interactions The human dimensions research community LULCC program and human and landscape ecology communities are collectively viewing the landscape within a spatially explicit perspective where people are viewed as agents of landscape change that shape and are shaped by the landscape and where landscape form and function are assessed within a space time context Current researchers and those following this early group of integrative scientists face challenges in conducting this type of research but the potential rewards for insight are substantial
