Kitchen Economics Thomas Strychacz,2020-08-11 An analysis of how nineteenth century women regional writers represent political economic thought WINNER OF THE ELIZABETH AGEE PRIZE IN AMERICAN LITERATURE Readers of late nineteenth century female American authors are familiar with plots characters and households that make a virtue of economizing Scholars often interpret these scenarios in terms of a mythos of parsimony frequently accompanied by a sort of elegiac republicanism whereby self sufficiency and autonomy are put to the service of the greater good a counterworld to the actual economic conditions of the period In Kitchen Economics Women s Regionalist Fiction and Political Economy Thomas Strychacz takes a new approach to the question of how female regionalist fictions represent the economic by situating them within traditions of classical political economic thought Offering case studies of key works by Sarah Orne Jewett Mary Wilkins Freeman Harriet Beecher Stowe Rose Terry Cooke and Alice Dunbar Nelson this study focuses on three complex cultural fables the island commonwealth stadialism or stage theory and feeding the body politic which found formal expression in political economic thought made their way into endless public debates about the economic turmoil of the late nineteenth century and informed female authors These works represent counterparts not counterworlds to modernity and their characteristic stance is captured in the complex trope of feminaeconomica This approach ultimately leads us to reconsider what we mean by the term economic for the emphasis of contemporary neoclassical economics on economic agents given over to infinite wants and complete self interest has caused the sufficiency and common good models of female regionalist authors to be misinterpreted and misvalued These fictions are nowhere more pertinent to modernity than in their alliance with today s important alternative economic discourses

The Contingent Object of Contemporary Art Martha Buskirk,2005-02-18 An exploration of transformations in the nature of the art object and artistic authorship in the last four decades In this book Martha Buskirk addresses the interesting fact that since the early 1960s almost anything can and has been called art Among other practices contemporary artists have employed mass produced elements impermanent materials and appropriated imagery have incorporated performance and video and have created works through instructions carried out by others

Furthermore works of art that lack traditional signs of authenticity or permanence have been embraced by institutions long devoted to the original and the permanent Buskirk begins with questions of authorship raised by minimalists use of industrial materials and methods including competing claims of ownership and artistic authorship evident in conflicts over the right to fabricate artists works Examining recent examples of appropriation she finds precedents in pop art and the early twentieth century readymade and explores the intersection of contemporary artistic copying and the system of copyrights trademarks and brand names characteristic of other forms of commodity production She also investigates the ways that connections between work and context have transformed art and institutional conventions the impact of new materials on definitions of medium the role of the document as both primary and secondary object and the significance of conceptually oriented performance work for the intersection of photography and the human body in contemporary art Buskirk explores how artists active in the 1980s and 1990s have recombined strategies of the art of the 1960s and 1970s She also shows how the mechanisms through which art is presented shape not only readings of the work but the work itself She uses her discussion of the readymade and conceptual art to explore broader issues of authorship reproduction context and temporality Learn to Earn A.M.
