Goods For Your Health Improving Supplies Management In Nhs Trusts National Report:

The Management of Medical Equipment in NHS Acute Trusts in England Great Britain. National Audit Office, 1999 On cover title page NHS Executive Public Procurement Louise Knight, Christine Harland, Jan Telgen, Khi V. Thai, Guy Callender, Katy McKen, 2012-08-06 In many countries and sectors public procurement is developing from a functional orientation to an effective socio economic policy lever There is a great interest among managers and academics to learn from other countries and other sectors change initiatives and how they dealt with the challenges they encountered This text provides such learning opportunities presenting case studies of public procurement covering diverse nations sectors and issues The cases are combined with editorial commentary and contextualizing chapters to assist the student reader in understanding this complex topic The text combines descriptions of cases of public procurement with cross case analysis to draw out the key dimensions to enable further examination of the central themes Each case study concludes with three questions to aid its use as a teaching and training text Edited by a team of internationally recognised experts in the field this innovative text illustrates the strategies and innovations within public procurement on a global scale and highlights common problems that all countries encounter Public Procurement is vital reading for anyone with an interest in this topical area

The NHS Anthony Harrison, Jennifer Dixon, 2000 This publication argues that no health care system can do everything that is beneficial nor should it try to The way forward therefore is the best management of the inevitable gap between supply and demand To show how this can be achieved the book sets out the case for the way the NHS is currently financed and looks at the tensions caused by this funding past and present to show how to proceed to a better future Catalogue of British Official Publications Not Published by HMSO. , 1981 The procurement of consumables by National Health Service acute and Foundation trusts Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Committee of Public Accounts, 2011-05-20 The 165 NHS acute and Foundation hospital trusts in England spend over 4 6 billion a year on the procurement of medical supplies and other types of consumable goods Each trust controls its own purchasing and can purchase consumables in various ways dealing direct with suppliers through the national supplies organisation NHS Supply Chain or via the regional Collaborative Procurement Hubs They can also choose to join other trusts in collaborative purchasing arrangements for particular localities or types of supplies The Department sees the future for NHS procurement as a pyramid structure with national regional and local procurement of different types of goods as appropriate to the products and the supplier markets However this theoretical model does not reflect the current complex reality with a profusion of bodies involved in the procurement process Its effectiveness is open to question in the emerging landscape where Foundation Trusts act independently with no explicit incentive to co operate The fragmented system of procurement has produced a great deal of waste with trusts being charged different prices for the same goods ordering in inefficient ways and failing to control the range of products which they purchase The NAO has estimated that trusts could save around 500 million annually 10% of their consumables expenditure by amalgamating small orders into larger less frequent ones rationalising and standardising product choices and striking committed volume deals across multiple trusts A lack of data has limited progress towards more efficient procurement and there has not been sufficient control over procurement practices

Department of Health Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Committee of Public Accounts,2007-06-07 Properly managed the use of temporary nurses can play an important role in helping hospital achieve flexibility However their high use can have a detrimental impact on patient care and satisfaction In 2001 the Department of Health anticipated that a growth in the NHS workforce would lead to a decline in the use of temporary staff but in spite of this intention temporary nurses still account for the same percentage of the nursing budget around 9% On the basis of a report by the Comptroller and Auditor General the Committee has investigated the extent of the use of temporary nurses whether the process is properly planned and managed and whether there are safety and quality implications One of the conclusions is that there has a lack of planning and it is only as a result of the problem with deficits that the NHS has taken a more co ordinated approach BMJ ,2008 Managing high value capital equipment in the NHS in England Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Committee of Public Accounts,2011-10-25 The Commons Public Accounts Committee publishes it fifty third report of Session 2010 12 on the basis of evidence from the Department of Health In the past three years NHS trusts in England have spent around 50 million annually on buying three specific types of high value capital equipment Magnetic Resonance Imaging MRI and Computed Tomography CT scanners used mainly for diagnosis and Linear Accelerator Linac machines for cancer treatment The current value of these three types of machines in the NHS is around 1 billion Patient demand for services from these machines has increased significantly in the last decade and continues to grow Since 2007 the Department of Health has devolved responsibility for procuring and managing these machines to individual trusts but this structure is not conducive to delivering value for money The committee is concerned that the NHS is failing to optimise its purchasing power crucial at this time when 20 billion of savings in the NHS are required by 2015 The NHS needs to make high quality comparable data available on machine use and cost The procurement and management of high value equipment is fragmented and uncoordinated leading to wasted resources and variable standards of services Trusts have three main ways to purchase high value equipment by dealing directly with suppliers through framework agreements managed by NHS Supply Chain or by joining up with other trusts in collaborative purchasing arrangements The Committee believes there is a lost opportunity to use collective buying power to get lower prices and the committee expects NHS Supply Chain and other collaborative procurement bodies to work with trusts to share plans on future needs and get better prices and value for money by exploiting the joint buying power Goods for Your Health Audit Commission for Local Authorities and the National Health Service in England and Wales,1996 Nursing Times, Nursing Mirror ,2006 National Health Service landscape review Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Committee of Public Accounts,2011-04-27 This report examines the value for money risks and implications of the Health and Social Care Bill The Bill proposes a new model for the NHS focusing on patient outcomes The proposals are intended to transform the NHS in England into a highly devolved market based model in which local commissioners and providers of health services are freed from central control with an increased say for local authorities patients and the public Whilst the reforms could complement the imperative of achieving 20 billion efficiency gains by 2014 15 the reorganisation presents an additional challenge for the NHS The health reforms are still at an early stage and key questions have yet to be addressed It is vital that the Department creates robust accountability structures so that Parliament and the public can properly follow the taxpayers pound and hold those responsible to account The Committee is concerned that the Department has not yet developed a high quality risk management protocol for either the commissioning or providing bodies The Department acknowledges that some health trusts and some GP practices have some way to go to achieve foundation trust status or become commissioning consortia The Department must have effective systems in place to deal with failure so that whatever happens the interests of both patients and taxpayers are protected This report provides an overview of aspects of the reforms where Parliament requires clarification and draws out a number of risks associated with the transition to the new model that need to be managed

Design Tools for Evidence-Based Healthcare Design Michael Phiri,2014-12-05 The growing movement towards evidence based healthcare design has largely emphasised a change of culture and attitudes It has advocated for new ways of working but until now it has not focused on equipping healthcare clients and their designers with the practical means to exploit the potential benefits from evidence based architectural design Development of indicators and tools that aid designers and users of the built environments in thinking about quality enhances the design process to achieve better outcomes Importantly design tools can support managers and designers through end user involvement and an increased understanding of what patients and staff expect from their healthcare facilities They can facilitate the creation of patient centred environments which improve user satisfaction Design Tools for Evidence Based Healthcare Design Discusses the tools that are being used to achieve design quality and excellence within the context of NHS procurement systems such as PFI Procure21 and others Collates information that increases our understanding of these tools in order to be able to make the best use of them Clarifies where during the various stages of a building s life from inception design construction occupation and re use these tools should be used in order to derive the benefits possible from evidence based design Provides in one place an authoritative reference publication that will act as a memory a user guide and manual for these design tools Illustrated with case studies from throughout the UK and written by a well known expert in the field this book will provide essential reading for anyone involved in healthcare design Interprofessional Social Work Anne Quinney,Trish Hafford-Letchfield,2012-10-10 All Social
