Integrating Drama with Primary and Junior Education Agnes D. Walkinshaw, 2004 A sense of mystery surrounds the subject of drama within primary and junior education compounded by the assumption that the individual modalities of the experts in the field are exclusive rather than inclusive This has fostered obscurity and confusion as to what constitutes drama and indeed how drama should be taught The direct consequence of such misconception and erroneous supposition is the beggared implication of drama However in an era of primary and junior education when the Arts generally and drama specifically are being given a dutiful nod at best it is of critical importance that a solution to this problematic predicament be established This work offers such knowledge by deconstructing the methodologies and philosophies of Winifred Ward Peter Slade Brian Way Dorothy Heathcote and David Hornbrook within the neutral framework of Aristotle's dictates for drama These pioneers from the field of drama within education exemplify individual unique and exclusive styles Traditionally they would have been considered as incompatible However an unbiased examination and analysis of their work exposes mutual concerns common threads as well as polemic opinions A definition Human Computer Interaction Kikuo Asai, 2008-10-01 The book consists of 20 chapters each addressing a certain aspect of human computer interaction Each chapter gives the reader background information on a subject and proposes an original solution This should serve as a valuable tool for professionals in this interdisciplinary field Hopefully readers will contribute their own discoveries and improvements innovative ideas and concepts as well as novel applications and business models related to the field of human computer interaction It is our wish that the reader consider not only what our authors have written and the experimentation they have described but also the examples they have set The Impact of Teacher's Perceptions and Pedagogical Practices on the Educational Experiences of Immigrant Students from the Commonwealth Caribbean Wendy P. Hope, 2005 This book offers educators who are increasingly faced with diverse multi cultural inclusive opportunity to find a place to start the process of revisionary pedagogical practices that validate and affirm the experiences of their students During the 1960s the United States immigration laws were changed from one based on a quota system to a method that allowed for persons from virtually every country in the world to enter the United States as immigrants One of the by products of such a change in the laws was the increased numbers of persons entering the United States from the Caribbean Within this category a significant number of persons originated from the British Commonwealth Islands of Guyana Jamaica Trinidad and Tobago and Barbados among others Upon entrance into American schools these newly arrived immigrants have been often treated in the same manner as African American students There have been few accommodations made for culture or language differences despite the linguistic distance existing between the language they speak and that used in American schools as well as the cultural differences between the culture of home and school American This mishandling and incorrect assessment of immigrants from the British Commonwealth Islands is most likely due to false assumptions made about the language they speak Since English is the official language of these islands the population of persons originating from them is assumed to consist of English speakers Such assumptions do not reflect an understanding regarding the linguistic situation of the British West Indies In these nations English is most likely reserved for official domains in government and education while a patois is most likely the language of home church and friends The linguistic situation is further complicated by the many varieties of dialect that exist These language varieties range from those that are not mutually intelligible by English speakers to other varieties with a linguistic distance closer to the English spoken in countries where English is the native language for a significant segment of the population students is a by product of the degree and quality of the education that they have received in their homeland However many have not attended school on a regular basis or have attended schools that are not well equipped or staffed resulting in their not acquiring the necessary skills to do academic work in English as required in American schools It is this population of students in a school located in Brooklyn New York that the study of teachers beliefs perceptions and pedagogical practices and their impact on the educational experiences of newly arrived immigrant students from the Commonwealth Caribbean focuses upon This is an insightful and thought provoking examination of middle school students in the Buxton Intermediate School The purpose of this study as stated by the author is to examine teachers practices in working with immigrant students from the Commonwealth Caribbean in New York City public schools Nonetheless the study goes beyond its goal informative but also necessary for every educator who is teaching in a community with a significant population of immigrants from the British West Indies or is teaching in a linguistically diverse environment To reach its goal Dr Wendy Hope studied a class of newly arrived students from Jamaica Guyana Trinidad and Tobago and Barbados as well as other Caribbean islands It was part of a transitional program This was a self contained class taught for most of the day by one teacher who was also a Caribbean native Ms Jackson Nonetheless students also went to other classes such as mathematics gym music and careers taught by other teachers By examining the teaching practices of these educators who work with Caribbean students within this transitional program issues of race power pedagogy hegemony cultural conflict language and more emerged to reveal that oftentimes well intended and hard working teachers employ approaches that are counterproductive to their goals namely the education of their students two frameworks one drawn from Henry Giroux's 1993 theory of Border Crossings and a second Jim Cummins 1993 theoretical framework for intervention Empowering Minority Students were employed Both paradigms although distinctively different consider issues of power between students and teachers schools and the minority community and institutional structures impacting negatively on students Furthermore pedagogical issues stemming from a dominant subordinate relationship that include use of the minority students language and culture are addressed study is beyond the purview of this introduction a few of the questions addressed include what is the role of the students language and culture in the classroom is the culture and language of the students used as a vehicle to teach or is it viewed as an obstacle in the learning process to what extent is the culture of these students included in the curriculum how much do teachers know about the culture of these students are parents of these students encouraged by teachers to be active participants in their children s education how do teachers see their role in relation to the transitional program where these students are housed for a significant portion of their daily schedules do teachers feel that different approaches should be used to teach these students observing of teachers it was concluded that little deviation from conventional teaching approaches was employed to teach these students despite teachers acknowledgement that these students were part of a transitional program and their level of English competency was substandard Furthermore it was found that parental involvement was something that teachers considered to fall under the responsibility of school officials rather than their responsibility In addition most teachers had little knowledge regarding how students were assessed and placed in the transitional program Furthermore most teachers admitted to working alone without much collaboration with any other of the teachers including the main teacher Ms Jackson the teacher in the self contained class who had these students for a significant segment of the day These findings a few of the many results yielded by this study stemmed from teachers who felt that they were good teachers with the best interest of their students in mind While examining the results yielded by this study a major concern regarding multicultural education emerged need to respond to racial linguistic ethnic and cultural diversity has been the advocacy of most schools of education In addition in reviewing the mission statements of five schools of education within the City University of New York issues of social justice acknowledgment and respect for what students bring with them to the classroom the need for collaboration among teachers and respect for the language and culture of students are a few of the many goals professed by these documents Nonetheless there exists a disparity between what schools of education are advocating and what is occurring in the classroom Thus other questions emerge regarding why such a divide exists between what is being taught and the actual practice of teaching Could it be that the efforts to address the needs of a diverse population is one that is not really dealt by all but just a few teacher trainers who truly believe in such an approach While these issues are beyond the purview of this study the fact that they have surfaced lends testimony to the fact that we as educators must look at what we are doing
