Needs Geoffrey Moss, 1995. Published in association with Special Children magazine, this practical and highly flexible resource pack is designed to offer help for all those mainstream teachers who may have children with various sorts of special educational needs in their classes. Each section looks in detail at one of the key topics related to learning and behaviour problems. Each is based on a straightforward four-stage problem to solution approach through which teachers can build a plan of action for looking at possible solutions to children's needs. 1. Clarifying the problem: who has the problem and what sort of problem is it? 2. Collecting evidence: how serious is it and what are the causes and effects? 3. Planning: what can be done, who will do it, when and how? 4. Action: converting the plan to action, monitoring and review. In each chapter the discussion of planning strategies is supported by a case study example of its use in practice, together with materials for teachers to use and adapt in their own classroom contexts. Sections include literacy skills, maths skills, science thinking and learning skills, dyslexia, handwriting, speech and language difficulties. Taking into account the DfES's competencies for newly qualified teachers, this will be a valuable aid for student and newly qualified teachers and provides excellent guidance for experienced teachers and mentors Is discipline the best way to achieve an effective management of classroom learning? Paulette Reefer, 2016-12-08 Seminar paper from the year 1993 in the subject Pedagogy School Pedagogics grade A The University of the West Indies St Augustine course In Service Diploma in Education Programme language English abstract This essay attempts to engage in a philosophical, psychological and sociological exploration of the misconceptions and the truths of the statement 'Effective management of classroom learning can best be achieved through discipline'. This essay proposes that there are varying kinds of discipline types that can be counterproductive to the processes of education and learning and others which can result in increased and effective management of teaching and learning within the classroom. The topic under discussion is thus considered a highly contentious and debatable issue. This essay addresses the underlying assumptions of the statement which suggest that there are other methods of effective management of classroom learning but discipline is the best approach. In addition, it explores the subsequent logical conclusion that if indeed discipline is the best method for effectively managing classroom learning, it follows that the best disciplinarians will achieve optimum learning with students of their classrooms. In conventional usage, discipline means to bring under control to educate or train. There is a distinction to be made between varying types of discipline prevailing within schools. These can be placed easily into two categories: good effective discipline and bad ineffective discipline. Phillips, Weiner and Haring explain that good discipline is not a matter of punishment or a brutal attitude. It emphasizes the development of a structure which is conducive to the child's learning, achieving and developing emotional and social maturity. They posit that good discipline in schools helps to promote self-discipline as a habitual way of behaving. Self-discipline contributes to self-assurance and thus affects one's outlook and confidence and as such it is conducive to learning. On the other hand, they refer to bad discipline as discipline that is too harsh, too quickly administered and too defeating. Haring, Weiner and Phillips (1960) close and prolonged observation within many public and private schools at both primary and secondary levels would perhaps reveal varying interlacing of both good and bad discipline systems. Few would argue that maintaining good discipline is a necessary prerequisite to establishing a school or classroom climate that is conducive to learning. This belief is conceded to by Curving and Mendler Classroom Discipline Sylvester Kohut, Dale G. Range, 1986 The basic purpose of this text is to provide teachers with a practical guide for understanding and improving classroom management. Case studies included in the publication represent problems and issues common to urban suburban and rural school districts and personnel Chapter 1 which focuses on broad perspectives on discipline provides a historical overview and definitions followed by discussions of regionalism and discipline violence in the schools and attitudes toward educators use of corporal punishment Chapter 2 views discipline from the perspectives of theory research and practice Discussion concerns tips for getting off to a good start in classroom management organizational and instructional procedures the process of understanding student needs and behaviors development of self discipline and culturally different students Case studies from early childhood and elementary education settings and from middle school junior high school and senior high school settings are presented in chapters 3 and 4 Forty seven references are cited and an appendix lists 17 general resources as well as selected resource materials on self development discipline and classroom management RH Resources in Education ,2000
