Foreign Language Education in Japan Sachiko Horiguchi, Yuki Imoto, Gregory S. Poole, 2015-12-23

Language education is a highly contested arena within any nation and one that arouses an array of sentiments and identity conflicts. What languages or what varieties of a language are to be taught and learned and how? By whom for whom for what purposes and in what contexts? Such questions concern not only policy makers but also teachers, parents, students as well as businesspeople, politicians and other social actors. For Japan, a nation-state with ideologies of national identity strongly tied to language, these issues have long been of particular concern. This volume presents the cacophony of voices in the field of language education in contemporary Japan with its focus on English language education. It explores the complex and intricate relationships between the local and the global and more specifically the links between the levels of policy, educational institutions, classrooms and the individual. In the much contested field of foreign language teaching in Japan, this book takes the reader directly to the places that really matter. With the help of expert guides in the fields of anthropology, sociology and linguistics, we are invited to join a vital discussion about the potentially revolutionary implications of the Japanese government's policy of teaching Japanese citizens to not only passively engage with written English texts but to actually use English as a means of global communication. Robert Aspinall, PhD, Oxford Professor, Faculty of Economics, Department of Social Systems, Shiga University, Japan. This insightful book about language education involves different disciplines using ethnographic methods. Both native and non-native speakers of Japanese or English collaboratively examine two different types of qualitative approaches in Japan: the positivistic and the processual. This is a must-have book for researchers and educators of language who are interested in not only Japan but also language education generally. Shinji Sato, PhD, Columbia Director of the Japanese Language Program, Department of East Asian Studies, Princeton University, USA.

Voicing in Japanese Jeroen Maarten van de Weijer, Kensuke Nanjo, Tetsuo Nishihara, 2005. The architecture of the human language faculty has been one of the main foci of the linguistic research of the last half century. This branch of linguistics, broadly known as Generative Grammar, is concerned with the formulation of explanatory formal accounts of linguistic phenomena with the ulterior goal of gaining insight into the properties of the language organ. The series comprises high quality monographs and collected volumes that address such issues. The topics in this series range from phonology to semantics, from syntax to information structure, from mathematical linguistics to studies of the lexicon.
