WildFlowers Judy Fitch,2013-09 As a senior high school teacher I fell in love with my students every single year My stories will make you laugh cry and cringe at the reality of the lives of our wildflowers Kids are kids however these kids needed me more than your average child of privilege Most parents love their children however a mother at the age of fourteen I believe cannot offer what a mother at the age of thirty can offer For many violence and poverty were their facts of life Many came to school for food hugs love and support My priceless experiences in the slammer proved to be the most rewarding of all Each day I thought how the situations in which these kids found themselves was more often than not the result of faulty parenting Growing up was not about T ball picnics vacations and college Growing up for some wildflowers was all about survival My career involved love baby showers funerals talent shows proms and courtroom appearances I believe everyone is given a gift My gift was the uncanny ability to communicate with at risk teenagers I spoke their language I understood that there were reasons not excuses for their problems These wildflowers were born into this world just as sweet and innocent as every other child Their surroundings dictated and directed their futures For years I went to bed worrying about them and I awoke wondering what would happen each and every day to my wildflowers They loved me because I loved them If reading my book helps just one teacher to help make a difference in just one wildflower s life my promise to my father to write this book will have made it all worth while
