Helkie, David H. Howard, Jaime R. Marquez, 1994      Output Decline in Transition International Monetary Fund, 1998-04-01 This paper presents a detailed analysis of the output decline in Kazakhstan in the early years of the transition The decline is documented at the aggregate and sectoral levels and the quality of the available data is reviewed A growth accounting framework quantifies the productivity slowdown in Kazakhstan and illustrates how excessive capital accumulation under central planning has contributed to the output decline In addition strong evidence is found that disorganization and inherited sectoral misallocation have played a significant role Credit contractions and reductions in aggregate demand may have had an effect but clear patterns of causality cannot be established      Global Economics in Extraordinary Times C. Exchange Rate Regimes for Emerging Markets John Williamson, 2000 In the aftermath of the Asian global financial crises of 1997-98 how should emerging markets now structure their exchange rate systems to prevent new crises from occurring This study challenges current orthodoxy by advocating the revival of intermediate exchange rate regimes In so doing Williamson presents a reasoned challenge to the new prevailing attitude which claims that all countries involved in the international capital markets need to polarize to one of the extreme regimes to a fixed rate with either a currency board or dollarization or to a lightly managed float He concludes that although there is some truth in the allegation that intermediate regimes are vulnerable to speculative crises they still offer offsetting advantages He also contends that it would be possible to redesign them to be more flexible so as to reduce their vulnerability to crises
