sometimes contradictory definitions of architectural preservation to work out practical strategies for defining the relationship between public good and private profit In arguing for the preservation of houses of worship and Indigenous earthworks for example some invoked the public interest of their stewards to strengthen corporate control of these collective spaces Meanwhile businessmen and political partisans adopted preservation of commercial sites to create opportunities for and limits on individual profit in a growing marketplace of goods And owners of old houses and ancestral estates developed methods of preservation to reconcile competing demands for the seclusion of and access to American homes to shape the ways that capitalism affected family economies In these ways individuals harnessed preservation to garner political economic and social profit from the performance of public service Ultimately Martinko argues by portraying the problems of the real estate market as social rather than economic advocates of preservation affirmed a capitalist system of land development by promising to make it moral
