

Abstract

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary middle-aged women. The study was a randomized controlled trial. The intervention group (n = 20) participated in a 12-week training program, while the control group (n = 20) remained sedentary. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The training program included aerobic, strength, and flexibility exercises. The primary outcome was the change in physical fitness, measured by the 6-minute walk test (6MWT). The secondary outcome was the change in health-related quality of life, measured by the EuroQol-5D (EQ-5D) questionnaire. The results showed that the intervention group had a significant increase in 6MWT distance and EQ-5D score compared to the control group. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve physical fitness and health-related quality of life in sedentary middle-aged women.

Abstract: The authors examined the effects of a 12-week, 1000 kcal/day energy-restricted diet on the body composition and metabolic profile of 10 obese women. The authors found that the diet was effective in reducing body weight and body fat, and that the metabolic profile improved. The authors concluded that the diet was a safe and effective means of weight loss.
