Kephala John E. Coleman, 1977 This is the first volume in the final publication of the University of Cincinnati's investigations on the island of Keos It describes the excavation of a small site on the headland of Kephala about one kilometer north of the Bronze Age site of Ayia Irini Remains of both a settlement and its cemetery were uncovered unusual in excavated Aegean sites earlier than the second millennium B C Although doubt is expressed about its exact date the site definitely falls into the period between the Neolithic and Early Bronze Age when evidence of a hierarchical more developed society emerges Occupied for less than a century by a community of fewer than 100 people the settlement was probably abandoned around the end of the fourth millennium B C perhaps because a worsening climate could no longer support early agriculture on the barren rocks around the site The report concludes with specialist studies on the different classes of artifact found including some of the earliest evidence for copper working in the Aegean Excavations at Nemea III Darice Elizabeth

Birge, Robert C. Knapp, John D. Mac Isaac, 1992 Annotation The authors describe Nemea one of the five Greek sites of ancient athletic games and examine in great detail the coins discovered there from the classical period to the Early Christian period and after The Cambridge Ancient History, 1970 Encyclopedia of Greece and the Hellenic Tradition Graham theoretical framework on the archaeology of migration with new data from excavations in Greece Turkey Cyprus Syria Lebanon and Israel and thereby reconstructs the social history of the Aegean migration to the southern Levant The author follows the story of the migrants from the conditions that caused the Philistines to leave their Aegean homes to their movement eastward along the sea and land routes to their formation of a migrant society in Philistia and their interaction with local populations in the Levant Based on the most up to date evidence this book offers a new and fresh understanding of the arrival of the Philistines in the Levant In Search of the Dioskouroi.
