Excavations At Tepe Yahya Iran 1967 1975 The Early Periods:

Excavations at Tepe Yahya, Iran, 1967-1975 C. C. Lamberg-Karlovsky, Thomas Wight Beale, 1986 Excavations at Tepe Yahya describes the geographical and paleoenvironmental setting of Tepe Yahya and details the earliest architecture at the site the production of ceramics and metallurgy and the excavations small finds Interpretive essays examine settlement patterns change and development over time and the community's setting in the wider context of core periphery interaction in the fifth and fourth millennia BC Excavations at Tepe Yahya, Iran, 1967-1975, 1986 Excavation at Tepe Yahya, Iran 1967-1975 C.C. Lamberg-Karlovsky, 1986 Excavations at Tepe Yahya, Iran 1967-1975 Peter Magee, Peter Grave, 2004 Tepe Yahya provides a stratigraphic sequence that stretches some 6 000 years from the Neolithic period to the early centuries AD As a result the site is critical for understanding cultural processes in southeastern Iran In this volume of results of the excavations at Tepe Yahya Peter Magee presents evidence from the Iron Age occupation of the site Looking beyond the epigraphic and historical data and examining the insights provided by the artifactual record Magee describes how a small settlement located some distance from the main centers of power came into being and was affected by the emergence of the Achaemenid imperial system which stretched from Pakistan to Libya Early Urban Life in the Land of Anshan William M. study of the site's ceramic assemblages has not been published. This monograph brings to final publication a stratigraphically based chronology for the Early Bronze Age settlement at Tepe Hissar. Based on a full study of the ceramic assemblages excavated from radiocarbon dated occupational phases in 1976 by Dyson and his team and linked to Schmidt's earlier ceramic sequence that was derived from a large corpus of grave contents, a new chronological framework for Tepe Hissar and its region is established. This clarified sequence provides ample evidence for the nature of the evolution and the abandonment of the site and its chronological correlations on the northern Iranian plateau, situating it in time and space between Turkmenistan and Bactria on the one hand and Mesopotamia on the other.

The Archaeology of Iran from the Palaeolithic to the Achaemenid Empire Roger Matthews, Hassan Fazeli Nashli, 2022-06-30. The Archaeology of Iran from the Palaeolithic to the Achaemenid Empire is the first modern academic study to provide a synthetic diachronic analysis of the archaeology and early history of all of Iran from the Palaeolithic period to the end of the Achaemenid Empire at 330 BC. Drawing on the authors' deep experience and engagement in the world of Iranian archaeology and in particular on Iran-based academic networks and collaborations, this book situates the archaeological evidence from Iran within a framework of issues and debates of relevance today. Such topics include human environment interactions, climate change and societal fragility, the challenges of urban living, individual and social identity, gender roles and status, the development of technology and craft specialisation, and the significance of early bureaucratic practices such as counting, writing and sealing within the context of evolving societal formations. Richly adorned with more than 500 illustrations, many of them in colour and accompanied by a bibliography with more than 3000 entries, this book will be appreciated as a major research resource for anyone concerned to learn more about the role of ancient Iran in shaping the modern world.

Ancient Iran and Its Neighbours Cameron A. Petrie, 2013-12-31. The fourth millennium BC was a critical period of socio-economic and political transformation in the Iranian Plateau and its surrounding zones. This period witnessed the appearance of the world's earliest urban centres, hierarchical administrative structures and writing systems. These developments are indicative of significant changes in socio-political structures that have been interpreted as evidence for the rise of early states and the development of inter-regional trade embedded in longer-term processes that began in the later fifth millennium BC. Iran was an important player in western Asia, especially in the medium to long range trade in raw materials and finished items throughout this period. The 20 papers presented here illustrate forcefully how the re-evaluation of old excavation results combined with much new research has dramatically expanded our knowledge and understanding of local developments on the Iranian Plateau and of long range interactions during the critical period of the fourth millennium BC.

The Bronze Age Towers at Bat, Sultanate of Oman Christopher P. Thornton, 2016. In the third millennium BC the Oman Peninsula was the site of an important kingdom known in Akkadian texts as Magan, which traded extensively with the Indus Civilization, southern Iran, the Persian Gulf states and southern Mesopotamia. Excavations have been carried out in this region since the 1970s, although the majority of studies have focused on mortuary monuments at the expense of settlement archaeology While domestic structures of the Bronze Age have been found and are the focus of current research at Bat most settlements dating from the third millennium B C E in Oman and the U A E are defined by the presence of large circular monuments made of mudbrick or stone that are traditionally called towers Whether these so called towers are defensive agricultural political or ritual structures has long been debated but very few comprehensive studies of these monuments have been attempted Between 2007 and 2012 the University of Pennsylvania Museum of Archaeology and Anthropology conducted excavations at the UNESCO World Heritage Site of Bat in the Sultanate of Oman under the direction of the late Gregory L Possehl The focus of these years was on the monumental stone towers of the third millennium B C E looking at the when how and why of their construction through large scale excavation GIS aided survey and the application of radiocarbon dates This has been the most comprehensive study of nonmortuary Bronze Age monuments ever conducted on the Oman Peninsula and the results provide new insight into the formation and function of these impressive structures that surely formed the social and political nexus of Magan s kingdom

Archaeology of Afghanistan Allchin Raymond Allchin,2019-06-03 Afghanistan is at the cultural crossroads of Asia where the great civilisations of Mesopotamia and Iran South Asia and Central Asia overlapped and sometimes conflicted Its landscape embraces environments from the high mountains of the Hindu Kush to the Oxus basin and the great deserts of Sistan trade routes from China to the Mediterranean and from Central Asia to the Arabian Sea cross the country It has seen the development of early agriculture the spread of Bronze Age civilisation of Central Asia the conquests of the Persians and of Alexander of Macedon the spread of Buddhism and then Islam and the empires of the Kushans Ghaznavids Ghurids and Timurids centred there with ramifications across southern Asia All of which has resulted in some of the most important diverse and spectacular historical remains in Asia First published in 1978 this was the first book in English to provide a complete survey of the immensely rich archaeological remains of Afghanistan The contributors all acknowledged scholars in their field have worked in the country on projects ranging from prehistoric surveys to the study of Islamic architecture It has now been thoroughly revised and brought up to date to incorporate the latest discoveries and research Sasanian and Islamic Settlement and Ceramics in Southern Iran (4th to 17th Century AD) Seth M. N. Priestman,Derek Kennet,2023-10-31 This monograph comprises the final publication of a study supported by the British Institute of Persian Studies and undertaken by Seth Priestman and Derek Kennet at the University of Durham The work presents and analyses an assemblage of just under 17 000 sherds of pottery and associated paper archives resulting from one of the largest and most comprehensive surveys ever undertaken on the historic archaeology of southern Iran The survey was undertaken by Andrew George Williamson 1945 1975 a doctoral student at Oxford University between 1968 and 1971 at a time of great progress and rapid advance in the archaeological exploration of Iran The monograph provides new archaeological evidence on the long term development of settlement in Southern Iran in particular the coastal region from the Sasanian period to around the 17th century The work provides new insights into regional settlement patterns and changing ceramic distribution trade and use A large amount of primary data is presented covering an extensive area from Minab to Bushehr along the coast and inland as far as Sirjan This includes information on a number of previously undocumented archaeological sites as well as a detailed description and analysis of the ceramic finds which underpin the settlement evidence and provide a wider source of reference By collecting carefully controlled archaeological evidence related to the size distribution and period of occupation of urban and rural settlements distributed across southern Iran Williamson aimed to reconstruct the broader historical development of the region Due to his early death the work was never completed The key aims of the authors of this volume were to do justice to Williamson's remarkable vision and efforts on the one hand and at the same time to bring this important new evidence to ongoing discussions about the development of southern Iran through the Sasanian and Islamic periods

Investigating Archaeological Cultures Benjamin W. Roberts, Marc Vander Linden, 2011-06-04 Defining culture is an important step in undertaking archaeological research Any thorough study of a particular culture first has to determine what that culture contains what particular time period geographic region and group of people make up that culture The study of archaeology has many accepted definitions of particular cultures but recently these accepted definitions have come into question As archaeologists struggle to define cultures they also seek to define the components of culture This volume brings together 21 international case studies to explore the meaning of culture for regions around the globe and periods from the Paleolithic to the Bronze Age and beyond Taking lessons and overarching themes from these studies the contributors draw important conclusions about cultural transmission technology development and cultural development The result is a comprehensive model for approaching the study of culture broken down into regions Russia Continental Europe North America Britain and Africa materials Lithics Ceramics Metals and time periods This work will be valuable to all archaeologists and cultural anthropologists particularly those studying material culture Prehistoric Settlement Patterns and Cultures in Susiana, Southwestern Iran Abbas Alizadeh, 1992-01-01 This book reports the results of an archaeological survey undertaken in southwestern Iran by a remarkable researcher Dr F G L Gremliza The author Abbas Alizadeh presents Gremliza's survey data and provides an analysis of the developmental implications
