Displacement caused by climate change is an area of growing concern With current rises in sea levels and changes to the global climate it is an issue of fundamental importance to the future of many parts of the world This book critically examines whether States have obligations to protect people displaced by climate change under international refugee law international human rights law and the international law on statelessness Drawing on field work undertaken in Bangladesh India and the Pacific island States of Kiribati and Tuvalu it evaluates whether the phenomenon of climate change induced displacement is an empirically sound category for academic inquiry It does so by examining the reasons why people move or choose not to move the extent to which climate change as opposed to underlying socio economic factors provides a trigger for such movement and whether traditional international responses such as the conclusion of new treaties and the creation of new institutions are appropriate solutions in this context In this way the book queries whether flight from habitat destruction should be viewed as another facet of traditional international protection or as a new challenge requiring more creative legal and policy responses law and the international law on statelessness Drawing on Current Issues in Educational Policy and the Law Kevin G. Subsidiary Form of EU Citizenship Diego Acosta Arcarazo,2011-05-23 This book studies the implications for third country nationals of the adoption of the Long term Residence Directive This Directive has the potential to become a subsidiary form of EU citizenship which escapes direct control by Member States Hence this Directive brings the prospect of transforming Member States control over the relationship between territory and population In order to arrive at this conclusion the book looks at its content and at the way in which Member States have implemented some of its most controversial articles It then explores how the Court of Justice could interpret those articles taking into account its previous jurisprudence on Turkish workers and EU citizens and calling into question the compliance of several national provisions with EU law
