Amoss, Stevan Harrell, 1981 As anthropologists we offer this book about aging in a wide variety of human societies in the hope of its making three contributions First this book will help to remedy a massive neglect of old age by the discipline of anthropology The pioneering work of Leo Simmons 1945 has remained a lonely monument since the 1940s for despite recent interest in the subject of aging in modern Western societies on the part of social gerontologists and sociologists little has been done by anthropologists on aging in non Western societies Where it has been treated at all it has been in the form either of a few final paragraphs in the discussion of the life cycle or of a simple ethnographic fact among other facts about a certain social system What has been missing has been any attempt to put aging in a cross cultural or comparative perspective to give this vital subject the same treatment that has been accorded marriage for example or death or inheritance or sex roles Second this book will bring a needed cross cultural perspective to the study of social gerontology The recent explosion of interest in this field has been largely confined to the study of aging in North America and Europe But we anthropologists feel that such a culturally limited study though interesting and productive in its own right is dangerously narrow if it does not consider what aging is like in other societies What aspects of aging for example are human universals and have to be planned for as inevitable and what aspects are cultural particulars and can be avoided modified or strengthened under certain social conditions By presenting both a biological account of the universals of human aging Weiss and specific ethnographic accounts of aging in a wide variety of societies we believe we can help to put North American aging into perspective Third we hope this book will serve as an illustration of a particular anthropological approach to unity and diversity in human societies and cultures Perhaps the main task of sociocultural anthropology is a twofold one the explanation of cross cultural universals somehow rooted either in the biological nature of the human species or in universal imperatives of social organization and the explanation of intercultural variations rooted in a dialectical interaction between culture and the material conditions partially created by culture in which it exists If unity and diversity can indeed be explained in this way the cross cultural study of aging can serve as a paradigm By first setting out what seem to be the universals determined by the biology of the human species and by then exploring the range of variation in cultural solutions we ought to be able to formulate a set of principles that will allow us to explain why variations occur in a certain way Nine ethnographic case studies are enough we believe to enable us to formulate some preliminary hypotheses about the nature and causes of variation in the social process of aging

Zoo Talk Patricia G. Patrick, Sue Dale Tunnicliffe, 2012-09-29 Founded on the premise that zoos are bilingual that the zoo in the shape of its staff and exhibits and its visitors speak distinct languages this enlightening analysis of the informal learning that occurs in zoos examines the speech of exhibits and staff as well as the discourse of visitors beginning in the earliest years Using real life conversations among visitors as a basis for discussion the authors interrogate children s responses to the exhibits and by doing so develop an informal learning model and a zoo knowledge model that prompts suggestions for activities that classroom educators can use before during and after a zoo visit Their analysis of the visitor voice informs creative suggestions for how to enhance the educational experiences of young patrons By assessing visitors entry knowledge and their interpretations of the exhibits the authors establish a baseline for zoos that helps them to refine their communication with visitors for example in expanding knowledge of issues concerning biodiversity and biological conservation The book includes practical advice for zoo and classroom educators about positive ways to prepare for zoo visits engaging activities during visits and follow up work that maximizes the pedagogical benefits It also reflects on the interplay between the developing role of zoos as facilitators of learning and the ways in which zoos help visitors assimilate the knowledge on offer In addition to being essential reading for educators in zoos and in the classroom this volume is full of insights with much broader contextual relevance for getting the most out of museum visits and field trips in general
